Cheerful Here, Gloomy There.
Four-Legged Fish.
Two Sides of Mussolini.
Good News for Mice.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

SOME NEWS is good, some is gloomy. California sends cheerful news. Dr. E. C. Moore, very able surgeon of the Pacific Coast, reports that in his going to and fro, which includes use of flying machines, for hurried operations, he finds much more optimism, and, says he:

"Optimism must come first."

THE AMERICAN Machine and Manufacturing Company, of San Francisco, reports that:

"Not on the Pacific Coast at this time, nor have there been for the past fortnight, nor are there in sight for the next month sufficient ships to carry the canned fruits and dried fruits ordered by Britain and the Continent."

Coming increases in British tariff account for part of this, not all.

ENGLAND SENDS unpleasant news, savage fighting by Communists who have established a reign of terror at Birkenhead, suburb of Liverpool. Rioting in the streets, savage fighting, and shops are looted.

Thirty-eight thousand unemployed explain the trouble.

The unemployed abroad are not as patient as our own.

IN DAYS when attacking Darwin was popular, before those that used to fight him began fitting their teachings to his science, the question was frequently asked:

"Where are your connecting links?"

When Darwin said life began in the ocean, that creatures came up from the water and gradually made themselves at home on land, anti-Darwinians asked:

"Where is your link between water animals and land animals?"

The question is answered now by a scientific expedition that brings back from Greenland many samples of stegocephali fossils, an animal fish with four legs, between a fish and a frog in the scale of evolution.

OVER FIVE thousand such specimens were found on the Greenland shore, plenty of missing links, and their cash value, sold to museums, would be enough to pay the cost of a three years' expedition.

Scientists classify evolution of life on the planet into five principal groups: First, fish, then frogs, then reptile, then birds, finally mammals, ourselves. The birds, able to fly out of danger, might have ruled the earth instead of ourselves. But once they got wings they probably stopped thinking. All they had to do was fly from danger. Our feeble, two-legged ancestors had to stay on earth, fight it out, and use their brains, so they won.

Prince Knud, young son of the King of Denmark, went on that expedition, spending long months at hard work, setting a good example to other sons of kings, including sons of American money kings.

ONE SIDE of Mussolini's character was seen when he negotiated a treaty restoring limited temporal power to the Pope, the right to issue money and postage stamps, and make laws for the tiny Vatican territory.

Another side of Mussolini's character, his real attitude toward "temporal power," was shown Sunday, when he dedicated a monument commemorating the capture of Rome from troops of the Pope in 1870.

The monument stands on the spot "where fighting Italian troops, the Bersaglieri, charged through the Pope's troops, and broke their resistance." King Victor Emanuel, believed to be a good Catholic, attended the ceremonies with Mussolini and reviewed fifty thousand Bersaglieri.

The Osservatore Romano, organ of the Vatican, calls the ceremony an offense to the church, suggesting other heroism would have been equally well commemorated.

MUSSOLINI'S attitude toward the church seems to be that of his fellow countryman, Napoleon Bonaparte, hostile, at heart. Napoleon took the crown from the Pope to crown himself, as one greater than the Pope.

But he restored property and salaries to the Catholic clergy, saying that he needed spiritual as well as military soldiers.

PROBABLY THE United States is the strongest Catholic country today, a fact that the Pope is pleased to recognize in many ways. He has conferred the rank of hereditary marquis on Dr. George J. Ryan, head of public schools in New York City, a title that will be inherited by Dr. Ryan's children.

The title is conferred upon the head of New York's public schools "in recognition of his services to education, the church and the community generally."

DR. RYAN was already a Knight of Honor of the Order of St. John the Baptist in Spain. He has the Cross of the Papal Order of Loretto, the Equestrian Order of the Holy Sepulchre of Jerusalem and various similar honors.

In addition to being president of the Board of Education in New York since 1922, Dr. Ryan is a member of the Board of Higher Education and a trustee in the Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum.

U.S. CHARGES DUFFY OWES ON $266,000 INCOME

Sum Received by Night Life Figure in 1929, Government Holds

The government took John Duffy, the Wheeling Kid, in tow today.

He was arrested in the lobby of the William Penn Hotel and charged with failing to file an income tax report on a gross income of $266,000 for 1929.

One of the best known and most popular figures in the city's night life, Duffy probably chuckled to himself as he recalled the days of 1929—when incomes hadn't shrunk to 1932 levels.

Duffy sat in the United States Commissioner's office pending efforts of friends to post bail for later hearing.

As well dressed as he was courteous, Duffy belied any connection with rackets.

He was arrested after an investigation by the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Duffy was arrested and then cleared five or six years ago when W. L. King, erstwhile vice crusader, directed a series of raids on gambling and drinking spots. Duffy was charged with violating the liquor laws in a Baum boulevard place. The cases were dropped when King disappeared. Later connections were with prominent roadhouses.

MRS. GARNER DIES IN TEXAS

DETROIT, Tex., Sept. 20.—(AP.)—Mrs. Sarah Jane Garner, 81-year-old mother of John Nance Garner, Democratic vice presidential nominee, died at her home here at 12:25 p. m. today.

Mrs. Sarah Jane Garner, mother of John Nance Garner, Democratic vice presidential nominee and Speaker of the House of Representatives, spent her whole life close to the northeast section of Texas in which she was born.

'PEG' ENTWHISTLE

Hurtles From Huge Signboard Near Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Sept. 20.—(INS.)—Simple funeral services will be conducted today for Lillian Millicent Entwhistle, 24, who leaped to her death from a huge signboard in the hills above Hollywood when she found her dream of success in the movie center shattered.

Miss Entwhistle came here from New York in 1929 where she had been connected with the Theater Guild. Despite her Broadway experience she was unable to obtain important movie roles. Her uncle, Charles H. Entwhistle, said:

"She felt she was a failure in motion pictures. I know that to be the motive. Love had no part in it."

DAVIS LOTTERY ROLE DENIED AT TRIAL

Senator Not Moose 'Mussolini,' Says Witness

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—(AP.)—Donald F. Stewart, for six years editor of the Moose Magazine, testified today that far from being the "Mussolini of the Moose," United States Senator James J. Davis held a "merely honorary" post with the Loyal Order of Moose.

The Pennsylvania Senator and former cabinet member, is on trial in federal court on indictments charging him with violation of federal lottery laws in connection with activities of the Moose, of which he is director general.

GOVERNMENT AIM

The government, which charges that Davis participated in lotteries allegedly held by the fraternal order and personally profited by them, is seeking to show that he was an actual dictator of all the order's activities.

Today defense counsel asked Stewart, who is the first witness at the trial, which began yesterday, if in fact Davis' position is not "merely honorary." Stewart replied:

"I would take it as such."

The Moose editor also testified that although many articles appeared in the magazine under Davis' name they were not actually written by him but were

HOTEL ORDERS BEER APRIL 15

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Sept. 20.—Looking far into the future, Leo H. Heyn, proprietor of the Summit Hotel, has placed an order with Hofbrau Haus, of Wuerzburg, Germany, for 50 barrels of beer. The delivery date was set for April 15, next year. By placing his order now, Heyn explained, he saves $2 a barrel and is assured of prompt delivery. He said:

"In view of the promises made both by Republicans and Democrats I feel safe in entering into this agreement."

PINCHOT TAKES LOAN FIGHT TO HOOVER

Protests Failure of R. F. C. to Grant State Aid

HARRISBURG, Sept. 20.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot today carried to President Hoover his fight with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for federal relief money for Pennsylvania.

In a telegram to the President he complained of the failure of the corporation to act favorably upon Pennsylvania's application for $10,000,000 immediately and asked for an appointment with the President on Friday to lay the matter before him if the R. F. C. does not give Pennsylvania some money within the next two days.

$45,000,000 SOUGHT

Two months ago, Gov. Pinchot applied to the board for $45,000,000, the maximum amount to be given any state and asked that $10,000,000 be given immediately with the remainder to be supplied as needed.

The board advised Pinchot that the state had not done its full share in caring for its unemployed and that no federal relief money would be given Pennsylvania until it had exhausted its resources.

After the Legislature, in special session, enacted a 1 per cent general sales tax to provide from $12,000,000 to $15,000,000 in state relief funds, the Governor again applied for federal relief money.

'CRUEL DELAY'

Since the last appeal, the board has taken no action on Pennsylvania's action.

Pinchot wired the President:

"After two months of constant effort to get help for Pennsyl-

Assassin Misses Soviet War Leader

WARSAW, Sept. 20.—(INS.)—An attempt was made this morning to assassinate Michael Tuchatchevsky, Soviet vice commissar of war, as the Moscow-Berlin express was passing through Minsk, according to the Polish Telegraphic Agency.

Two shots were fired through the window of the special car occupied by Tuchatchevsky and six Russian officers en route to Germany to view Reichswehr maneuvers. No one was injured.

Stand on War Debts Shows Legion Is Real Legion of Americans

THE AMERICAN LEGION showed itself indeed a LEGION OF AMERICANS in the action taken by its convention in Portland, Ore., on the following vital questions:

First: The League of Nations.
Second: The World Court.
Third: The cancellation of war debts.

To any proposal that the United States should join the League of Nations, the American Legion declared itself "UNALTERABLY OPPOSED."

As to the adherence of the United States to the World Court, the American Legion declared itself "OPPOSED—ON ANY TERMS."

Both of these institutions it denounced as "entangling alliances of the worst sort, against which George Washington strongly advised the nation in his farewell address."

On the insidious and persistent effort to coax and cajole, or threaten and coerce the United States into the cancellation of Europe's debt for war loans made by the United States, the declaration of the Legion deserves verbatim repetition. The resolution of the convention says:

"Whereas the Government of the United States during the World War loaned to the entente allied nations billions of dollars for the purpose of carrying on the war against Germany and her allies, and this money was secured by the sale of government bonds to the citizens of the United States,

"Be it resolved by the American Legion that they are unalterably opposed to the cancellation of the whole or any part of the debts owed the United States by foreign governments, generally known as war debts."

LET THE CANCELLATIONISTS PUT THIS IN THEIR PIPES AND SMOKE IT.

THE AMERICAN CONGRESS—both Senate and House of Representatives—took identically the same position only last year. The joint resolution of the House and Senate said:

"It is hereby expressly declared to be against the policy of Congress that ANY OF THE INDEBTEDNESS OF FOREIGN COUNTRIES to the United States SHOULD BE IN ANY MANNER CANCELED OR REDUCED and nothing in this joint resolution shall be construed as indicating a contrary policy, or AS IMPLYING that FAVORABLE CONSIDERATION will be GIVEN AT ANY TIME TO A CHANGE IN THE POLICY HEREBY DECLARED."

Now comes the ringing declaration of the nation's defenders—the veterans of the great war—TO PRECISELY THE SAME EFFECT.

How long will the American people suffer their patience to be abused by the artful, persistent, under-cover agitation by Wall street and a Wall street administration for the cancellation of Europe's war debts to the United States?

Never did debts exist which were so binding and so just.

Never was there a creditor so confiding and so generous as this country has been.

Never has the evasion of a debt been attempted by means so unworthy and for motives so sordid.

PLEAS FAIL WITH INDIA LEADER

Mahatma Refuses to Accept Freedom; Reported Ill

POONA, India, Sept. 20.—(AP.)—Mahatma Gandhi, leader of millions of India's people in the civil disobedience campaign against the British government, began at noon today the "fast unto death" which he announced last week as a protest against Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald's settlement of the Indian communal elections problem.

As he started his self-imposed starvation regimen, he was technically a free man. The government this morning let down the bars of his prison cell at Yeroda jail, where he has been a prisoner since January, but the Mahatma spurned the proferred freedom.

HUNDREDS OF WIRES

Hundreds of telegrams and letters from friends of the Mahatma, urging him to give over his proposed death fast, were received at the jail, and many Indian leaders added their efforts to dissuade him. He began preparing for the fast yesterday by cutting down on the amount of food taken at a meal and spacing the meals farther apart.

Gandhi was reported indisposed as he began his fast.

Gandhi's newest gesture is designed as a protest against the plan announced by Premier Ramsay MacDonald for granting separate representation to India's 60,000,000 "untouchables" and other minorities in the provincial legislatures proposed for India.

RIOTS BREAK OUT

AHMEDABAD, India, Sept. 20.—(AP.)—Riots broke out here today as Mahatma Gandhi began his death fast in Yeroda Jail at Poona. The trouble began over a proposal to open some of the Hindu temples to the "untouchables," whose voting privileges are the reason for Gandhi's fast of protest.

CUBS LEADING PIRATES

FIRST GAME

At Chicago—	R.	H.	E.
Pitts.	000	—
Chic.	10	—

Batteries—Swetonic and Grace; Bush and Hartnett.

WRIGLEY FIELD, CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—A crowd of 45,000 turned out here this afternoon to see the Chicago Cubs and Pittsburgh Pirates clash in a double-header.

A victory for the Cubs in the first battle would assure them of the National League pennant.

Steve Swetonic was on the mound for the Pirates and Guy Bush for the Cubs.

The game in detail:

FIRST INNING

PITTSBURGH — L. Waner walked. P. Waner rolled to Herman, who tagged L. Waner and threw to first for a double play. Comorosky doubled to left center. Traynor walked. Herman tossed out Suhr. One hit.

CHICAGO—Herman singled to left. Herman stole second. English struck out. Cuyler flied to P. Waner. Stephenson singled to left, scoring Herman. Moore hoisted to P. Waner. One run, two hits.

SECOND INNING

Two Sets of Triplets Bring Joy, Misery

Stork Welcomed by One Mother; Home Sought by Other

To one young mother triplets, her first-born, today brought joy, to another only misery and unhappiness.

In the Ohio Valley General Hospital 22-year-old Mrs. Mary Rose smiled at the surprise package—two girls and a boy.

In Vandergrift, Mrs. Florence Serena, 34, mother of seven, pleaded with someone to adopt the triplets and one other.

Mrs. Serena's triplets are 21 months old and healthy. The fourth child, which can be adopted, was born one month ago. Desperate with years of poverty, Mrs. Serena wrote:

"For reasons the mother feels she can't publish, she asks: Will someone having a good home and who loves children, come to the mother and give these four babies a home?"

The mother's plea appeared in vain. Her husband, Samuel Serena, grocery truck driver, said he would not sign papers permitting adoption of the triplets, as he was able to care for them.

Thoughts of adoption were far from the mind of young Mrs. Rose. She and her husband, Dominic Rose, prepared to take their triplets to their home at 275 High road, Stowe Township. Rose is an unemployed laborer.

Mrs. Serena lives at 310½ Longfellow street, Vandergrift.

JOBLESS MAN SHOOTS 3, SELF

DOVER, O., Sept. 20.—Four men, including Harvey Harper, 64, are in Union Hospital, from gunshot wounds after Harper ran amuck today in the Dover Manufacturing Company's plant. The other victims are Homer Kline, 32, foreman; Charles C. Maurer, 45, assistant superintendent, and Earl Rausch, 40. After shooting the three men, Harper barricaded himself in a plant garage and fired a bullet into his right temple. Lack of employment is said to have prompted Harper to attempt to poison Kline by pouring cyanide of potassium into a bottle of milk last Friday. Last night Harper was held for court by Mayor Simon Kappler, on the poisoning charge and was released under $2,000 bond. Kline was shot in the left breast, left shoulder and left arm. Maurer was shot in the left side and Rausch in the left leg.

WELLSBURG, W. Va., Sept. 20.—(AP.)—Samuel Gunion, 50, unemployed mill worker, today shot and probably fatally wounded Deputy Sheriff Theodore Fowler, 41, and was then shot in the leg by Deputy Sheriff Lawrence Morrison. Fowler, it is said, threatened Alphonse Spafollina, his former employer, who summoned the deputies. Fowler is in Wheeling Hospital and Gunion is in the Brooke County Jail.

LIGHT RATE REDUCTION HERE TO BE EFFECTIVE OCTOBER 1

TWENTY CENTS AVERAGE SAVING

Formal Announcement Awaits Return of F. R. Phillips

New electric light rates proposed by the Duquesne Light Company and accepted yesterday by Council probably will go into effect October 1, unless an agreement to make them operative sooner can be reached.

Announcement was withheld by the company pending return of Frank R. Phillips, president of the Philadelphia Company, who is out of the city. He is expected back tomorrow.

Under the new rates the average user of electric current in a house of seven rooms or less will apparently save about 20 cents a month. Consumers of homes having eight rooms or more will save proportionately.

RATES COMPARED

The new rate is:

First bracket, 15 k. w. hours, ... @ .07 net.
Second bracket, 15 k. w. hours, ... @ .05 net
Third bracket, 20 k. w. hours, ... @ .04 net
All in excess thereof, @ .03 net

Present rates are:

First bracket, 10 k. w. hours, ... @ .08 net
Second bracket, 20 k. w. hours, ... @ .05½ net
Third bracket, 30 k. w. hours, ... @ .04 net
Fourth bracket, balance..... @ .03 net

Considering this comparison on the consumer living in a seven-room house and burning 106 k. w. hours—the average bill—the saving would be 20 cents per month. The present bill is:

10 k. w. hours at .08.....$ .80
20 k. w. hours at .05½..... 1.10
30 k. w. hours at .04..... 1.20
46 k. w. hours at .03..... 1.38

Total $4.48

The new bill would be on the following basis:

15 k. w. hours at .07.....$1.05
15 k. w. hours at .05..... .75
20 k. w. hours at .04..... .80
56 k. w. hours at .03..... 1.68

Total $4.28

In both old and new schedules, the rates given in the first two brackets are after deducting discounts of one cent per kilowatt hour.

On the basis of a check of the company's figures available, this is a saving of approximately 4 per cent for the small home owner and up to 12½ per cent for those in larger residences and small shops. President John S. Herron, of Council, estimates the saving for consumers at $400,000.

In houses of more than seven rooms there are added three kilowatt hours in the first block; three in the second block, and four in the third block.

TWO COUNCILMEN OPPOSED

Two councilmen—P. J. McArdle and Charles Anderson—voted against the city going on record in any manner in connection with the case. Anderson pointed out he was willing that the consumers have advantage of the cut, but felt that a formal acceptance on record by Council was not necessary. He and McArdle contended the Public Service Commission would be hampered by Council going on record. Councilman Robert Garland did not vote. Those affirming the acceptance were Michael J. Muldowney, Clifford B. Connelley, John S. Herron, William J. Soost, Harry A. Little and W. Y. English.

In accepting the cut, Council did not agree to refrain from assisting the Public Service Commission in a fight for further reductions, it was pointed out.

Following acceptance of the proposal, Councilman English asked that President Herron inform all other public utilities here of the action and that prompt voluntary reductions in rates be asked in view of the Duquesne company's action.

OTHER UTILITIES

Among other utilities are the Equitable Gas Company, People's Natural Gas Company, Pittsburgh Railways Company, Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company, Parmelee Transportation Company, South Pittsburgh Water Company, Pennsylvania Water Company, Manufacturers' Light and Heat Company, and the Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania.

In the absence of Frank R. Phillips, president of the Philadelphia Company, who has been personally conducting the rate reduction negotiations with Council, officials of the Duquesne company declined last night to elaborate upon the proposal as submitted to Council by City Solicitor Waldschmidt.

It was explained that Phillips was out of the city and would not return until tomorrow.

BOY SAFE, SEEK KIDNAPERS

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—(AP.)—A kidnap band which restored 8-year-old John Arthur Russell to his wealthy father when the police hunt became too hot was sought throughout New York and many parts of the East today.

Stolen and held for $25,000 ransom, the boy was returned mysteriously late last night to the Brooklyn home of his father, Arthur S. Russell, Stock Exchange broker. Police announced no ransom was paid and that they believed the kidnapers had been frightened by an intense search.

The boy said that on his way home from school yesterday two men stopped him, took him for an automobile ride, and then to a small flat.

In the evening, he said, a woman and another man came in, and the woman took him by automobile to a street car, gave the conductor a nickel and asked him to let the boy off near his home. Three telephone operators saw him get off the car, recognized him from his picture in a newspaper, and took him home.

FAIL TO SHAKE ARSON STORY

Vincent Prato, who turned state's evidence, stood by his story during two hours' cross-examination today as the trial of five Braddock and Rankin men and one woman, on arson charges, was resumed in Criminal Court.

Prato had testified that Frank Getz, a defendant, offered him $3,600 to take the blame for the firing of Getz' home and Frank Nanci's home in Swissvale.

Besides Prato, Nanci and Getz, defendants are Getz' wife, Rose Getz, John Mihalick and John Andrina.

Police Chief Michael Jordan, of Rankin, testified today that Mihalick showed him where the cans used to carry gasoline to fire the homes had been tossed in Frick Woods.

3 STATES HOLD PRIMARIES

Associated Press.

Voters in New York, Massachusetts and Wisconsin today are choosing party candidates for November's election, with the number of ballots cast sharing interest nationally with the issues and personalities involved.

In Wisconsin, the power of the La Follette brothers and hotly contested economic issues hold the spotlight. In the two eastern states, prohibition is a major issue in a number of the congressional primaries.

Gov. Philip La Follette, of Wisconsin, is seeking renomination on the Republican ticket in a strenuously-fought campaign against former Gov. Walter J. Kohler.

Supported by the La Follette faction, Senator John J. Blaine is standing for the Republican senatorial nomination against John B. Chapple, Ashland editor, who has charged Blaine with radicalism.

New York's senatorial and gubernatorial candidates will be selected by October party conventions, but 17 of 45 seats in the next House are at issue today.

Massachusetts is deciding contests in eight congressional districts. The state's Democrats are renominating Gov. Joseph B. Ely without opposition, while Lieut. Gov. William S. Youngman has three opponents in his fight for the Republican gubernatorial nomination.

Prey of China Bandits, She Asks for Lipstick

LONDON, Sept. 20.—(AP.)—A cry for powder puff and lipstick from a British woman in distress among Chinese bandits in the wilds of Manchuria was reported to the Daily Mail today from Newchang.

Mrs. Pawley, kidnaped by the bandits near Newchang over a week ago, was quoted as writing to friends from the bandits' retreat:

"Please send me a powder puff, face cream and a lipstick. I don't want anything else but a bath."

The letter was received together with a demand from the bandits for 100,000 Chinese dollars as ransom. Mrs. Pawley said:

"The bandits intend to keep moving until the pursuit ceases. Please persuade the police and soldiers to keep away, otherwise they say we will be killed.

"I feel in a vile temper with the fools. They probably will want an extortionate ransom, but please don't bust yourselves."

Charles Corkran, another British subject, was kidnaped at the same time as Mrs. Pawley and is also being held for ransom.

REGISTRATION INTERFERENCE DENIED

Incident Provoking Socialist Protest Declared Joke

The Registration Commission is not instructing registration boards to register Socialists as Democrats, and a voter can register under any one of the 10 parties on the ballot, the commissioners declared yesterday.

Dr. William J. Van Essen, Socialist county chairman, sent a letter of protest to the commission, saying a board had refused to register William B. Webster as a Socialist in the Ninth District, Twenty-seventh Ward. He declared the board had made a Democrat of Webster.

But Webster explained to the Registration Commissioners that it was all in fun and the result of some "wisecracking." He had told the board that he wasn't sure how he wanted to register. Then he asked to be recorded as a Socialist. One of the board members who knew him said:

"You're no Socialist."

So Webster retorted:

"Well, make me a Democrat then."

Registration Commissioner Thomas Joyce in explaining the mixup yesterday said:

"The registration commission has no interest in the choice of party of any voter. All we want to see is that everybody who has the right of franchise qualifies to vote."

There is one more registration day after today, October 8. The polls are open for registration today in Pittsburgh from 8 to 11 o'clock this morning and from 5 until 11 o'clock tonight. In McKeesport, Duquesne and Clairton the polls are open from 8 until 10 o'clock this morning, from noon until 3 o'clock and from 5 until 11 o'clock tonight.

In the city the first registration day this year showed a drop of almost 50 per cent from the first registration of the last presidential year—1928. This year the figure was 38,787, in 1928, 63,055 registered on the first day—a drop of approximately 25,000.

Suit Against Davis Ordered Transferred

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—(INS.)—The suit for $25,000 damages against United States Senator James J. Davis, of Pennsylvania, brought by Morris Harmelin, was transferred today from jurisdiction of the Supremer Court, Second District, to the United States Court, Eastern District, on motion of counsel for Davis.

Harmelin alleged Davis, at the time Secretary of Labor, was responsible for his serving 40 extra months in Atlanta Penitentiary. He charged Davis lodged a warrant for deportation against him after he had served his minimum sentence, on a conviction of using the mails to defraud, and was eligible for parole.

U. S. REAFFIRMS ARMS STAND

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—(INS.)—President Hoover today reaffirmed American aloofness from the problem of German armament, now a matter of grave debate between Berlin, Paris and London.

At the same time, however, the Executive expressed the hope that Germany shall continue as a participant in the arms conference.

In an unexpected statement Mr. Hoover declared:

"The sole question in which this country is interested is in reducing armaments of the whole world, step by step."

munizing operation is performed curiously. The mice are inoculated with cancer in their tails, and after the cancer tumors develop, they are cut off with the tails.

Those thus treated become immune.

Treatment for human beings is far away, but science is gradually working toward success.

SOLEMN-FACED men governing Russia smile when France begins "talks" about seeking "an assured petroleum base" in Russia in return for friendly relations between Russia and France.

Russians know well what the petroleum base means. In war petroleum is more precious than gold. Tanks and airplanes must move; petroleum supplies power. The Russians know that France is expecting trouble with Germany, much sooner than it will probably come.

NEW YORK City, like a very big snowball, grows more rapidly than the rest of the country. Since 1890 the percentage of increase in New York has been fifty per cent greater than throughout the whole nation, although Manhattan, heart of New York, has been losing steadily to other boroughs. In the last hundred years the Bronx population has multiplied fifteen times. Brooklyn and Queens have doubled themselves twice.

The "foreign white stock" is changing. Dr. Walter Laidlaw, secretary of the city's census committee, says that by 1940 the white stock of Russian birth or parentage, alone, will outnumber the entire white stock of native parentage. In thirty years Negro population in New York has increased almost three hundred thousand.

All this will make the "noble Nordics" weep. But, if they will refuse to have babies, what can they expect?

HOOVER GETS AID APPEAL

vania's 1,250,000 totally unemployed and their wives and children, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation still persists in its cruel, needless and unexplained refusal to advance what Pennsylvania has every right to ask and to get.

"The Reconstruction Finance Corporation shows complete inability or complete unwillingness to realize the situation in Pennsylvania, and the pitiful need for help. Tens of thousands of families are living on $2 a week or less, and the need for relief grows greater day by day.

DISPUTE SCORED

"The test which the R. F. C. is attempting to enforce is not whether Pennsylvania needs help, which is beyond all dispute—nor whether the Commonwealth has done its full share, which is equally beyond dispute—but whether certain statistics can be furnished because records have been kept in certain ways.

"Last Friday Pennsylvania complied in full with the latest demand of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for useless statistics. If Washington does not act before September 22, may I have an appointment with you on Friday next to end this senseless embargo on feeding the starving in this state?"

In a statement to the press accompanying a copy of his telegram, the Governor said:

"The unexplained hostility of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to Pennsylvania continues in the face of relief really advanced to other parts of the country."

RAPS PENNSY LOAN

The Pennsylvania Railroad, he said, was given $2,000,000 in addition to the tens of millions it has already received to build freight cars when less than half of the freight cars in America are in use. He asserted that the R. F. C. was quoted as saying this car construction would create work for 500 men. He said:

"That would be one out of every 2,500 totally unemployed in Pennsylvania. Millions for the railroads, but not one cent for Pennsylvania."

He said that last week he had sent the information requested by the R. F. C. in answer to a letter saying that Pennsylvania's application would be given immediate attention when this information is supplied.

WITNESS DENIES DAVIS PART IN LOTTERY

Senator Not Promoter Of Charity Ball Court Told

"ghost-written" by Stewart and another man.

He said that Davis' name was used on the articles to give them "standing," because "Mr. Davis' name is and always has been an inspiration to any Moose."

Charles J. Margiotti, of defense counsel, asked Stewart if he drew material for the "Davis" editorials from speeches made by the Senator or from newspaper reports of his speeches. He answered:

"Unquestionably, to a degree."

Margiotti asked:

"Mr. Stewart, to whom are you responsible for the publication of the Moose magazine?"

He replied:

"To the executive committee."

"Are you responsible in any way to Mr. Davis?"

"No."

He said he was not required to follow advice from Davis, but that he would.

DAVIS INTERESTED

Davis appeared more interested in the proceedings today than yesterday. His iron-gray head pivoted slowly as his eyes followed lawyer and witness.

At one point Stewart launched into a lengthy statement on Davis' relation to the lodge. He said:

"He subscribed to a clipping service, encouraged members to come to his office and kept wholly in touch with the affairs of the order."

The government attempted to show through Stewart's direct testimony that Senator Davis, as director general of the Moose, was constantly in touch with the affairs of the organization and knew and approved its facts, including the alleged lotteries.

Margiotti asked:

"Who did actually run the Moose charity ball?"

Stewart said:

"The lodge conducted it."

He added that he did not know whether the supreme council of the lodge had anything to do with it.

It was in connection with the charity balls that the government charged lotteries were conducted. Stewart testified that each Moose lodge conducted its own ball.

WITNESS GRILLED

Louis Mead Treadwell, assistant federal attorney, examined Stewart. He asked:

"Mr. Stewart, you said you were responsible to the executive committee."

"Yes."

"If a member of the executive committee told you to do something you would do it?"

"Perhaps."

"What do you mean 'perhaps'?"

"I would use my judgment."

"Mr. Davis was a member of the executive committee, wasn't he?"

"No."

"Well, if the by-laws said he was a member would you still say that he was not?"

"I presume he may be an ex-officio member."

"Well is he a member?"

"To the best of my knowledge he is not."

"And that is as true as anything you have said this morning?"

Margiotti leaped to his feat to interpose objection. The court sustained the objection.

When the government attempted to question Stewart on his testimony before the grand jury the defense objected. Treadwell said:

"I feel we have the right to show that this witness is unfriendly to the government."

The court was inclined to sustain the objection because Stewart was not a defense witness.

The trial, moving swiftly, entered its second day after a jury was chosen yesterday and opening statements made. Treadwell declared that Davis profited financially, while the defense pictured the Senator as an unselfish, able organizer of charities.

RECORD OF CHECKS

Treadwell said he would show that checks totaling $172,300 from the proceeds of the drives were variously distributed: To pay off a note which was Davis' personal obligation, to his checking account, to a corporation controlled by him, and to an organization department account from which Davis drew funds. Treadwell made it plain there was no charge of wrongdoing in the way this money was distributed.

Attorney Tuttle charged the indictment of Davis was a plan to embarrass him politically in the midst of his re-election campaign. He said he would show the charity balls were not a lottery, that Davis did not participate in them and that he did not get a penny out of them. He said the use of $100,000 to pay off in part a note indorsed by Davis was a proper payment to compensate for liabilities Davis had incurred for the organization department of the Moose.

Mother Rescues Child From 'Circus' Noose

GREENSBURG, PA., Sept. 20.—(AP.)—Playing "circus" nearly ended in tragedy for Billy Kimmell, 5.

Billy climbed the haymow ladder, grabbed a rope, waved to imaginary admirers and swung across the barn in his "hair-raising" stunt. The rope became entangled in his legs and arms, and finally tightened about his throat.

The boy's mother became alarmed, no longer hearing the "circus noises" that emanate from the barn when he plays. She found him dangling, unconscious.

Billy lay on a hospital cot today—smiling. He will recover.

CARSTAIRS, NOTED ARTIST, FORETOLD END BY OWN HAND

'RUIN' BLAMED ON NATION OF MORONS

'Butchered by Rogues' Who Took Treasures, Friend Told

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—"I shall not, in order to nauseate myself with bad food and live in mediocre squalor, enter a profession that will bore me to death. Unless I find a congenial occupation I prefer to destroy myself. Having been ruined as an artist, I am of no use to the world longer, so it does not matter."

So James Stewart Carstairs, 40, declared recently in an interview. Today the noted artist and collector was dead—victim of an overdose of sleeping potion. Police listed the death as accidental.

Carstairs was found unconscious in his hotel room. Detectives searched the room and found a note addressed to John J. Cunningham, which said:

"Dear John:

"Many thanks for helping me out, not only about money, but because you were the only person who tried to find me something.

"Adieu,

"STEWART."

At the time of the interview, embittered because his art treasures realized only $7,000 at a sale, Carstairs assailed America as a country composed of "rogues and children" and governed by "morons." He said:

"What I cannot understand is how America can cold-bloodedly butcher a man as I have been butchered. They even took my easels and brushes, my etching set, unfinished canvases, frames without pictures—things that could be of no possible use to anyone but myself."

He went on to tell of his cruel disappointment at offering his treasured belongings at the sale which followed his voluntary petition in bankruptcy, only to have them fall into the hands of strangers whose bids, he said, were merely affronts to his sensitive appreciation.

Carstairs was born in Philadelphia and studied at Harvard. He was a brother of Carroll Carstairs, author, now in Europe.

G. O. P. AREAS FRIENDLY TO ROOSEVELT

Washington Will Go Democratic, Dill Tells New Yorker

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service.

EN ROUTE WITH GOV. ROOSEVELT, SPOKANE, Wash., Sept. 20.—Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt invaded the Pacific Northwest today, the first Democratic presidential nominee in many years to make a personal bid for the electoral votes of this far corner of the United States.

All of today will be spent in Washington; tomorrow in Oregon. Then the Democratic nominee will turn south along the coast to spend several days in President Hoover's home state of California.

Only one Democratic presidential candidate has carried Washington since the turn of the century. Woodrow Wilson did it in 1916 on his "he kept us out of war" platform.

DILL OPTIMISTIC

This year, Gov. Roosevelt has been informed, it is a different story. Senator C. C. Dill, one of his managers in the Chicago convention, accompanied the Roosevelt train into the state, and he assured the Governor that he was going into friendly territory and into a state that could be counted in the Democratic column in November.

As elsewhere, Gov. Roosevelt found in Washington today vast discontent over economic conditions. In the particular case of Washington, there is added to this normal discontent considerable dissatisfaction with the manner in which the Smoot-Hawley tariff act has worked out, and with the paralysis of Asiatic trade owing to the depressed price of silver.

Gov. Roosevelt's pledge at Butte yesterday that, if elected, he would immediately initiate an international silver conference struck a responsive chord.

DELAYED BY WRECK

The Roosevelt special was running behind schedule today owing to a delay in Montana because of derailment of a train which preceded it. As a result, Spokane was not reached until early this morning.

Gov. Roosevelt's train was due in Seattle about noon. It will leave at midnight and reach Portland tomorrow morning. At Portland, the Democratic nominee will deliver the third of his major addresses on the trip, dealing with public utilities control.

Curtis Set to Trail Roosevelt On Stump

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—Vice President Charles Curtis today prepared to leave the capital on a campaign trip which is expected to take him through the West in the wake of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, the Democratic presidential candidate.

Determined to challenge Roosevelt's speeches vigorously as he did in his opening speech in Pennsylvania, the Vice President indicated he would be almost daily on the stump between now and election day.

Curtis is slated to speak in Knoxville, Tenn., tomorrow night, in Chattanooga the next night and then join Representative Thatcher, of Kentucky, senatorial candidate in that state, for a two-day tour. Following this invasion Curtis will speak in West Virginia and then turn westward.

Mrs. Dolly Gann, sister of the Vice President, has left for Chicago on a western tour.

BURLESQUE BAN IN N. Y. SENDS SHOWS HERE

Minsky Scores McKee For Ousting 'Fatima' And Ancient Art

By QUENTIN REYNOLDS
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—No longer will Fatima, the jingling of glass beads and the clanking of brass bracelets heralding her approach, glide upon the stage and with lithesome gyrations and sinuous wriggles practically cause a panic among the bald-headed gentlemen in row A. No longer will a red-nosed comedian, in baggy clothes and enormous shoes, lean over the footlights to ask the audience confidentially:

"Didja ever hear the one about . . ."

The muse is muted and no more will the "bald-headed row" be thrilled by the last shrill chorus of:

"We are the dancers, the hit of the show."

For burlesque by royal order of His Majesty McKee is banished from Broadway and is even now flying to the hinterland to be joyously embraced by crowds quite willing to take their fun where they find it—even if it is on the stage of a burlesque theater.

PITTSBURGH-BOUND

This is the season when burlesque troupes gather for their annual invasion of the road and what is Broadway's loss will be the rest of the country's gain for the No. 1 companies will now proceed to Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, St. Louis and other points.

In vain, Billy Minsky, the high lord of burlesque, ranted today. In vain he rushed to a lawyers' office to stop the enforcement of Mayor McKee's decree of banishment. Even when he realized that he had been slipped a "McKee Finn," he refused to acknowledge his defeat. He said:

"My shows are as decent as any Broadway musical show. I give them Broadway revues at popular prices, and I've seen lots of stuff in $8.80 shows I wouldn't think of using on my stage."

END OF LONG WAR

For several months, business theatrical and religious organizations have waged a war against Minsky and his two burlesque houses, the Republic and the Empire. Friends of burlesque whisper that jealousy, aroused by the success of Minsky, has had something to do with the protest of Broadway against the "art" which features ladies of generous avoirdupois and not so generous dress.

Mayor McKee, in closing Broadway's two burlesque houses, acted at the instigation of Police Commissioner Edward Mulrooney, who declared that they were "breeding places of crime which offered filthy entertainment."

Minsky took violent exception to the Commissioner's statement and insisted his shows were clean.

Burlesque Here Upheld By Clark and Walsh

Public Safety Director James M. Clark and Police Supt. Peter P. Walsh agreed today they would let no outsiders set up burlesque houses in Pittsburgh, but would allow George Jaffe to operate the Academy Theater so long as the shows were not vulgar. Clark added:

"People are burdened with too many laws and restrictions. If a man or woman chooses to attend a burlesque show I believe that is the individual's privilege."

RUSSIA EXPELS WOMAN WRITER

MOSCOW, Sept. 20.—(AP.)—Rhea Clyman, a Toronto (Canada), correspondent here for the London Daily Express and the Toronto Mail and Empire was ordered expelled from Soviet Russia today on a charge of writing false news about the country.

The order followed recent publication by the Daily Express of a series of articles she wrote after a trip to the timber regions in Northern Russia, purporting to reveal methods employed by the secret police at a prison camp near Kem. The newspaper Izvestia attacked her today in a half-page editorial as a "provocateur from the bourgeois camp."

Miss Clyman, who is 28, has been in Russia four years. At present she is accompanying Alva Christensen and Mary L. De Give, two Atlanta (Ga.), girls, on a motor tour of Southern Russia. The American girls are not affected.

Trial Marriages Urged for Students

LONDON, Sept. 20.—(INS.)—Companionate marriage for university students was advocated by Bertrand Russell, famous English philosopher, in a new book published today. In the book, titled "Education and the Social Order," Russell said:

"University life would be better both intellectually and morally if both male and female university students had temporary childless marriages."

Mary Duncan Loses Suit Over Clothes

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 20.—(AP.)—A judgment for $780.50 against Mary Duncan, stage and screen actress, has been entered here in favor of D. C. Herkner, assignee of the Bergedorf & Goodman Company, of New York. The suit charged Miss Duncan more than a year ago bought apparel worth $850.50 and paid $50 on account.

'Ten Spot' Torn; Theft Try Charged

As C. G. Shink, 40, of 1659 Kiralfi street, started to comply with a request of William Satter, 50, homeless, for a dime, he pulled a roll of bills from his pocket, police said. Satter grabbed for the money, according to police, succeeding in wresting half of a $10 bill from Shink's hand. Both men were lodged in Central Police Station on suspicious person charges.

LEXINGTON, Va., Sept. 20.—(AP.)—Maj. Gen. John A. Lejeune, superintendent of Virginia Military Institute, suffered a fracture of the skull and a broken left arm yesterday when he fell in walking down an embankment on the campus.

Gen. Lejeune, former commandant of the United States Marine Corps, was accompanying Col. William Couper, business executive of V. M. I., on a trip to the school power plant when the accident occurred.

ACTRESS DENIES CHAPLIN TROTH

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—(INS.)—Although Paulette Goddard will be the leading lady in Charlie Chaplin's next picture, her assignment will not end with the ringing of wedding bells. She declared:

"When I left Hollywood, a lot of people seemed surprised that Charlie Chaplin kissed me goodbye. But it was just a friendly kiss. Charlie's an awfully nice man, but we're not engaged."

Miss Goddard passed through here en route to New York.

FORGET EUROPE, CURLEY ASKS

SALT LAKE CITY, Sept. 20.—(AP.)—Mayor James M. Curley, of Boston, placed the bulk of the blame for the present depression upon President Hoover and declared it is time "to put a man in the White House who will stay on the job, forget Europe for a while and do something for the United States," in an address here last night.

The Boston Mayor, touring the West in the interests of the candidacy of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic presidential nominee, termed the Republican administration "the most helpless and hopeless" in the history of the nation. He added:

"President Hoover has during his entire incumbency devoted the resources of America to the salvation of foreign nations, in order that foreign nations might be protected and their citizens employed. The moneys needed for the operation of American industries and for the employment of American workers have been diverted in a golden stream to Europe."

Mayor Curley criticized the eviction of the bonus marchers from Washington, but expressed no opinion as to the justice of the demand for immediate cash payment of the bonus.

Ex-Mayor Walker Arrives in Naples

NAPLES, Italy, Sept. 20.—(INS.)—Former Mayor James J. Walker, of New York, arrived at 10:20 a. m. today aboard the SS. Conte Grande. He did not receive an official welcome.

Walker left the ship immediately and went with his secretary, George Collins, who was still suffering from an intestinal ailment, to a hotel.

President Cancels Press Conference

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—(AP.)—President Hoover today canceled his scheduled semi-weekly press conference.

EXTRADITE PAIR POLICE 'AIDED'

Two prisoners, who City Detective Walter Monaghan charged were aided in beating a charge by city police, today were en route to other states to face old charges. James Foster, of Cleveland, O., was turned over to a United States marshal to answer a series of robbery charges in Chicago in 1928, on which it is said he jumped $5,000 bond. John Russo, of Youngstown, O., was being returned there to face robbery charges, having been released on $12,000 bail. Police Supt. Peter P. Walsh's investigation into the alleged connivance of police to effect the release of Foster and Russo is still being pushed.

When Monaghan arrested the two men in the Hill district he said neither had the owner's nor driver's licenses for an automobile in which they were riding. At the hearing the next day Foster produced the owner's card. Monaghan charged that police smuggled the card to Foster, and the prisoners were held over.

Magistrate Leo Rothenberg in Central Police Court complimented Monaghan on his work.

11 CHILDREN SAVED IN FIRE

Eleven children were carried to safety by their parents while flames swept through a three-story brick building at 303 Sixth street, Glasspor., at 5 a. m. today.

Three families live on the upper floors and all escaped unhurt. Four of the rescued were infants.

One of the children of Harry Esau, 39, who lives on the third floor, was awakened by smoke after the fire alarm had been turned in. Esau and his wife, Bessie, then carried out their seven children—Adelaide, 13; Charlotte, 11; Betty, 9; Sylvia, 6; Harry 5; Vera, 3; Evelyn 1.

CONTEMPT CASE BAIL GRANTED WILSON

WILMINGTON, Del., Sept. 20.—(AP.)—Harold D. (Three-Gun) Wilson, deputy prohibition administrator for Nebraska, was free on bail today after spending several hours yesterday in the custody of a United States marshal on a charge of contempt of court placed against him nearly two years ago.

Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock, national director of prohibition, and Maj. Randolph C. Shaw, chief counsel of the Prohibition Bureau, representing Wilson, obtained his release in bail of $1,000 through Judge Victor B. Woolley, of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

APPEAL PENDING

The Nebraska deputy was released pending an appeal to the Circuit Court on the ground that District Court Judge John P. Nields erred in holding Wilson yesterday because the case in which the charge arose no longer existed.

While serving as deputy administrator in Delaware in October, 1930, Wilson raided the clubhouse of the Democratic League of Delaware. The club appealed to the District Court on the ground the raid was illegal.

During a hearing on the appeal, Wilson refused to tell from whom he received a key with which he entered the place and Judge Nields ordered him held in contempt. The Circuit Court of Appeals recently upheld Judge Nields and the case came before him today for final disposition.

RAID HELD ILLEGAL

Before the case was heard, the court, on application of Leonard E. Wales, U. S. Attorney ruled that the raid was illegal and ordered the return of property seized. Woodcock followed this move with an application that the contempt charge against Wilson be vacated on the ground that whatever Wilson did was in a case that does not now exist.

Woodcock said he was representing the Prohibition Department, and Wilson admitted an error had been made and apologized for what had occurred.

Judge Nields, however, refused to vacate the charge and ordered Wilson held in the custody of the marshal until he purged himself of the contempt charge. Several hours later, Judge Nields and Judge Woolley held a conference after which it was announced the District Court had agreed to permit Wilson's release pending an appeal on the ground that the case no longer existed.

EGAN ABANDONS PRISON APPEAL

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 20.—(AP.)—Frank J. Egan, deposed and convicted San Francisco Public Defender, apparently was resigned today to entering San Quentin Prison under a life sentence—the last legal barrier to his commitment torn away by his own hand.

The former official, convicted of ordering the slaying of his widowed client and friend, Mrs. Jessie Scott Hughes, informed his attorney, Vincent W. Hallinan, by letter last night to drop plans for an appeal.

His action followed by a few hours a court hearing at which he and Albert Tinnin, convicted jointly with him, were advised they must enter prison despite their appeal plans. They were granted five days in which to "straighten up their affairs."

BEDHAM, Mass., Sept. 20.—(INS.)—The will of Charles E. Dubois, written in his lawyer's office two days before he committed suicide and before the body of his wife was found buried in the cellar of the Dubois cottage at Plymouth, was filed in a Norfolk County Probate Court today, revealing an estate with an estimated value of $50,000.

The Tuckahoe (N. Y.) jeweler bequeathed to his aged mother, Mrs. Cecline Dubois, his entire estate. The exact value of the estate will depend, it was stated, on the market value of jewelry he owned.

SQUIRREL HILL PAIR CONVICTED OF ARSON

BEAVER, Pa., Sept. 20.—Guilty as indicted was the verdict of the jury in the arson trial of L. J. Kamons and his son, Abbon Kamons, Pittsburgh stogie manufacturers, returned last night after an hour's deliberation.

The defendants were accused of starting an incendiary fire last Christmas eve that destroyed the shoe store of Daniel Mazor, Ambridge.

A blow was struck at the alibi presented by the defense when Bert Williams, marriage license Bureau clerk, of Allegheny County, testified in rebuttal for the prosecution that in the application for a marriage license issued to Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Plessett, Mrs. Plessett gave the date of her birth April 22, 1882. The Kamons had claimed that on Christmas eve they attended a party in their home in Squirrel Hill in honor of Mrs. Plessett's birthday.

L. J. Kamons was also linked by testimony with incendiary fires in Rankin. Abe Redlich, confessed firebug, recalled to the stand, testified he had given Kamons a $100 check for his part in a fire at Rankin, which he charged Kamons had started. The check was drawn on the Ambridge Savings and Trust Company and when returned was found indorsed by Mrs. L. J. Kamons.

The two defendants will be sentenced later.

WIEGAND SEES PEACE PERILED IN EUROPE

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—European peace is endangered by the Franco-British rejection of the Reich's demands for armament equality and by Germany''s internal struggle between President Paul von Hinderburg and Adolf Hitler, fiery Fascist leader.

This warning was sounded last night by Karl H. von Wiegand, chief foreign correspondent for Universal Service, who spoke over a nationwide radio chain of the National Broadcasting Company from station WEAF.

ABSENCE FROM PARLEY

Von Wiegand pointed out Germany's absence from the disarmament conference may be used as an excuse for its failure, should the League of Nations be forced to gather up the wreckage, while German friendship is turning more and more toward Russia.

Von Wiegand revealed that Germany could train armed forces in Russia, and in 1925 had a secret arrangement with Moscow that never before has been revealed. He said:

"One of the immediate effects of the British and French attitude will be an intensification of the open as well as underground relations between Germany and Russia. It will regalvanize the idea that Germany can achieve her freedom only with the aid of Russia.

"There is nothing except the absence of money to prevent Germany from building aircraft in Russia or from training her future richthofens there."

RISE OF HITLERISM

After attributing the rise of Hitlerism to the international trend of German governments, Von Wiegand said:

"The renaissance of the national spirit in Germany will always be credited to Hitler by historians. In gathering the younger elements around him he was only following the example of Mussolini and Stalin.

"The Germany of today is not the submissive, crawling Germany of eight or ten years ago. This, together with more than 5,000,000 Communists; 6,000,000 unemployed, and 14,000,000 Hitler followers, is dynamite to domestic peace and tranquility within Germany.

"You cannot have peace in Europe without peace in Germany and between Germany and her neighbors. The Germans will never reconcile themselves to being treated as a second-class nation.

Detectives Attend Reddington Rites

Funeral services for County Detective James J. Reddington, of McKeesport, were held with solemn requiem high mass in St. Peter's Roman Catholic Church, McKeesport, today. Attending were other county detectives, many McKeesport officials and friends of Reddington's.

Reddington was buried in St. Mary's Cemetery, McKeesport. He died in his home, Saturday, of heart trouble.

Embezzler Given Term in Workhouse

WRIGLEY DOLLAR BILLS TALK OF PITTSBURGH

Wrigley Reporters Stir Up People With Their Dollar Bills.

By MISS MINT

Pittsburgh people tell Mr. Spear and I, and our assistants, that we have stirred up more excitement than anything that has hit town in many a day. According to the boys and girls, the circus isn't even in it with the dollar bills we are passing out.

Whenever I stop at a school again, I think I will have to have a policeman along to get me out alive. I must look like a modern Pied Piper, with a couple of hundred children following me down the street, shouting "Wrigley's," and waving gum.

MRS. J. M. OWENS, 1624 Chislett St., has one of those new dollar bills for carrying Wrigleys. She said, "I never use any other gum but Wrigley's—it is always my favorite."

MRS. G. H. CRIER, 1742 Morningside Ave., said, "I prefer Double Mint—I usually chew it after every meal." She had a package with her and went away with a dollar bill.

MRS. JOHN L. O'KEEFE, 5422 Bossart St., had a package of Spearmint. Her statement that she always keeps it on hand for the children after their lunch earned her a dollar bill.

FRANK R. RILEY, 4810 Liberty Ave., was buying a paper when I stopped him. Sure enough, he had a package of Double Mint. He received a new dollar bill when he told me "Wrigley's" is great; it keeps that 'after-cigarette' taste away."

RICHARD E. GRABE, 1115 Franklin Ave., Wilkinsburg, said he always chews Wrigley's and knew about Mr. Spear and I being in town but was surprised to have me stop him. A dollar bill was his when he told me "Wrigleys is a supreme confection and a good companion at work or on vacation."

MRS. HARRY LEVIN, 920 Maplewood Ave., Ambridge, was downtown shopping when I stopped her. She had a package of Spearmint in her purse which netted her one dollar.

JACK GALLAGHER, 5131 Carnegie Ave., is enthusiastic about the new cellophane wrapping on Wrigley's gum. He had a package of Juicy Fruit and was promptly rewarded with a one dollar bill.

HAD JUST BOUGHT WRIGLEY'S

JOHN DANKO, JR., 1009 W. Grant Ave., Duquesne, was getting on a street car when I stopped him. He had just bought a package of Spearmint and was very much excited when I gave him a dollar bill.

RALPH OLSON, 523 Hawkins Ave., North Braddock, was standing at the entrance of the steel works chewing gum when I stopped him. He was chewing the right kind—Wrigley's—it earned him one of those fresh dollar bills.

J. J. CAINE, 434 Ruxton St., Mount Washington, is enthusiastic about Double Mint. He always carries it with him, he said. He proved it and promptly received a dollar bill.

JOHN PRITCHARD, 97 S. 23rd St., a student at South High, said he had been looking for me for ten days. He had a package of Juicy Fruit. When I gave him a dollar bill he could hardly wait to get home to tell his friends about it.

LOUIS MORGAN, 2902 Webster Ave., the traffic officer at Carson and Smithfield Sts., had a package of Spearmint in his blouse pocket. When he showed it to me and said, "I like Spearmint because of the clean taste it leaves in my mouth," he received a dollar bill.

It seems every policeman Mr. Spear or I have stopped has Wrigley's. None of them has failed us yet.

Among other Pittsburghers to receive dollar bills within the last few days are: ANDREW McCULLOUGH, 423 Natchez St., Mt. Washington; PATRICK GIBBLIN, 705 Cabot Way; AUGUST HERDST, 1 Mt. Oliver St.; JUSTIN McCARTHY, 142 Madaline St., Carrick; CYRIL BUTLER, 17 N. 5th St., Duquesne; W. C. GORDON, 620 Braddock Ave., Braddock; C. T. MULLEN, 527 5th Ave., Pitcairn; TOM O'SHEA, 1416 Jancey St.; WILLIAM B. ROSS, 5170 Liberty Ave., and ANNA M. CONWAY, 3586 Beechwood Blvd.

So many people are surprised that Mr. Spear and I and our helpers are still in town. They thought we'd only be here for a few days. They're wrong—we'll be here just as long as our supply of dollar bills and that's indefinitely. So if you haven't yet been stopped by us don't think it's all over; we'll tell you when this hunt for Wrigleys Gum users is over. So be sure to get in the game and stay in by always carrying a package of Wrigley's. Then, when you are stopped and asked your opinion, you will have one of those crisp Wrigley dollar bills to dazzle your friends with.

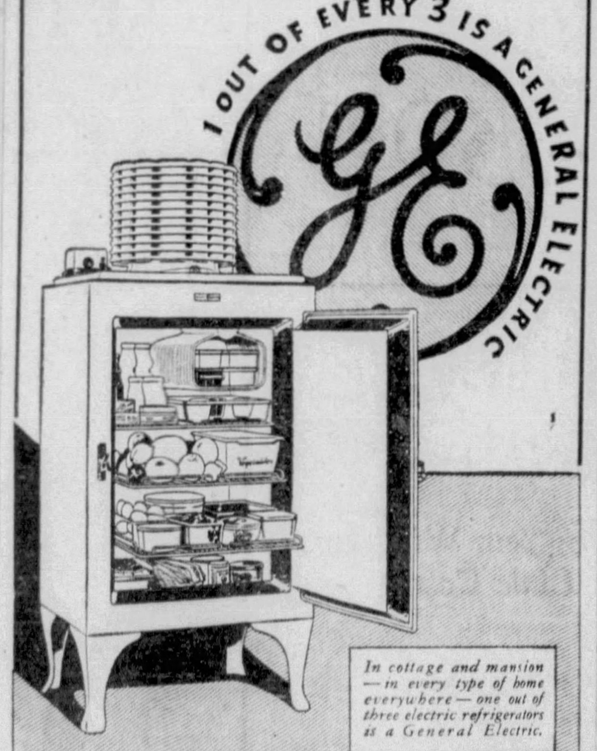
TO WAIT is actually to WASTE

You Can Save $10 This Month Alone

EVERY MONTH—every day—that you delay installing your General Electric is an actual waste of money. With a G-E you can save 20% to 40% through buying in larger quantities. "Left-overs" can be safely saved for later serving. Spoilage of milk, meat, fruits, etc. will be avoided. Desserts and salads will cost less. Savings are even greater during the fall and winter when food stuffs cost more. Remember, it's always summertime in your kitchen.

Select your G-E today and enjoy its convenience and economy that much longer. You won't wear it out. Next year—and for years to come—it will continue to serve you. All the simple mechanism is sealed in the ageless steel walls of the Monitor Top, requiring no attention—not even oiling. Sturdy cabinets are of all-steel, with interiors porcelain-lined. Sliding shelves add to convenience.

G-E prices and terms are today the lowest in history. A small payment will bring a G-E to your home tomorrow—and you will save $60 or more this fall and winter.



In cottage and mansion—in every type of home everywhere—one out of three electric refrigerators is a General Electric.

NOTABLES BROADCAST -:- Puritan Love Story On Network Here -:- NEWS OF RADIOLAND

Irvin Cobb, Lowell Thomas Swap Yarns on WCAE; 'Raffles' Police Drama

Four prominent personalities, each representative of a different phase of radio entertainment, are brought together in another of the NBC Artists Service programs, broadcast over an extensive network, including WCAE, at 8:30 tonight.

They are Melissa Alexander, noted writer and lecturer on politics and economics; Lowell Thomas, adventurer and traveler; Irvin S. Cobb, humorist, and Maurice Sachs, French economist.

Mr. Cobb

Miss Alexander, one of America's outstanding women speakers, discusses "Our American Democracy" and Sachs speaks on the topic, "History Repeats Itself in Modern European Politics." Thomas tells one of his famed "Tall" stories and Cobb entertains with his typically droll witticisms. The musical portion of the program is presented by the NBC Symphony Orchestra conducted by Cesare Sodero.

Louis Brownlow, of the Public Administration Clearing House, heads a list of well known speakers heard in a round-table discussion of "Construction Economy in the National Government" during the broadcast of "You and Your Government" over an NBC network and KDKA tonight at 8 o'clock. Other speakers are Representative Carl R. Chindblom, of Illinois; Katherine A. Frederic, of the National League of Women Voters; William Hard, NBC political commentator, and Henry P. Seidemann, of the Brookings Institution, Washington, D. C.

Program Pointers

"The Moth," a piano-orchestra fantasia composed by facile Lee Sims and played by George Edwards, with Josef Koestner's Orchestra, is presented for the first time on the air as a highlight of the Musical Memories program on KDKA tonight at 9 o'clock. The work, while decidedly in the modern spirit, echoes a classical origin, and interprets the fluttering of a moth about a flame. Edgar Guest also is heard on the program in some more of his unique stories.

Mr. Sims

A dramatization of the Puritan love story of Margaret Tyndal and John Winthrop, the first Governor of Massachusetts, is the "Sheer Romance" presentation, broadcast over an NBC-WJZ network from the studios of KDKA tonight at 6:30.

Georgie Price gives his impression of the comedy style of George Jessel, with whom he appeared years ago as a child actor, under the banner of Gus Edwards, on WJAS at 7:45 p. m.

The story of a modern "Raffles" who decided to "go straight" and of his "one job too many" is the police dramatization on WCAE at 10. Lew Conrad provides the music.

Mrs. Ellis A. Yost, New York political leader, tells why women should vote when she speaks on WJAS at 4:30.

Frank Crumit introduces his newest song, "The Grandson of Abdul Abulbul Amir," on WCAE at 8 o'clock. The ditty has to do with a mythical game of golf between the grandsons of Abdul and Ivan Skavinsky Skavar.

Laddie Stewart and his sister, Margaret, are guest artists on the "Friendship Town" program on KDKA at 9:30.

A play-by-play account of the Pirates-Cubs doubleheader at Chicago today is scheduled on WWSW beginning at 2:30.

Ray Perkins, who likes to go to weddings and throw rice at the bride, discusses the serious happenings of the day in his usual delirious manner on WCAE at 7:30.

Frederick C. Haller, president of the Haller Baking Company, discusses the latest developments in the baking industry when he appears as guest speaker on the "Pittsburgh Industries program on KDKA at 7:15.

LISTENING IN

Ruth Etting Tells How Hard Work Brings Success.

Ruth Etting, that glamorous singing star of "Music That Satisfies," gives her recipe for a successful career—a simple life and hard work. The former "Follies" beauty herself lives in comparative retirement—healthful recreation, a motor trip once in a while, occasional evenings at the theater and early to bed. Cocktail and whoopee parties are taboo. She has two hobbies, her fan mail, which she always answers, and a miniature museum composed of curios and gifts from fans . . . One of her greatest delights is helping young radio, screen and stage aspirants who come to her.

Miss Etting

Because listeners, whose wishes are not lightly to be ignored, have been petitioning the "Old Singin' Master's" sponsors, Harry Frankel (Clem Cutler), may be given more time on the air through rearrangement of the programs.

It's just been revealed that there's a new member in the Ray Perkins household. She is 6-months-old Wendy Gay Perkins, adopted four months ago from a young mother and jobless father who are Perkins fans. She'll become an official member of the family through formal adoption in six months. The Perkins also have a boy, Ray, Jr., 8 and husky.

Frank Black has revived the ancient Greek musical scale in his search for new and interesting effects for the Revelers. His latest arrangement of Youmans' "Without a Song" includes several of these weird harmonizations.

The winner of that collie puppy to be given away by Albert Payson Terhune will hear his name announced on the Home Circle program within 10 days. More than 3,000 listeners competed.

Johnny Marvin, the "lonesome" singer, is hobbling around with a cane—he slipped and fell while taking his daily five-mile run recently . . . Speaking of canes, Fred Rogers has no less than 8 of them, two of which are now being used by limping KDKA attaches.

Martha Boswell is completing a six-months' task of covering a small studio piano with tinfoil . . . Welcome Lewis recently was given a birthday party by members of her vaude act . . . Jack Parker, of the Men About Town, is an expert at making his own jigsaw puzzles . . . Graham McNamee has a pair of goldfish 17 years old.

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh's Society Happenings

Patricia Pitt

Just when the unitiated might think golfing was about over until next spring, the women down at Allegheny Country Club, Sewickley Heights, start all over again.

And today the members are playing the first round for the vice president's trophy. The reason for the beginning of this event is that during August, when nearly all the members were out of town, there were no special matches. And now that they are at home again, they are playing.

A notable event today for women golfers is taking place at the Wildwood Country Club, the Women's Golf Association of Western Pennsylvania tournament.

* * *

Mickey Mouse

There's to be somethine exciting for boys and girls early next month, and I'm sure many mothers and others of the grown-ups will enjoy thoroughly taking the children to the event.

Mickey and Minnie Mouse will be here in person October 8. Jean Gros will present the Hestwood marionettes in a stage show, "Mickey Mouse the Champion," that morning, a Saturday, at 10:30 o'clock in the Hotel Schenley ball room and that afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

There'll be a Mickey Mouse luncheon at the hotel after the morning performance and a Mickey Mouse tea after the afternoon performance.

Many society women will be patronesses for the big day.

* * *

Flower Show

Word comes from Greenwich that the twenty-first annual fall show of the Westchester and Fairfield Horticultural Society, assisted by the Greenwich, Rye, Riverside and New Rochelle Garden clubs and the Hortulus Club, of Greenwich, and I don't know how many more, to be held at Greenwich, September 21, 22 and 23, is to be a most notable event.

Among the patronesses will be Mrs. Samuel F. Pryor, Jr., the former Mary Taylor Allderdice, and Mrs. Richard Croft.

* * *

Cot Club Cast

Way back in the summer time, I mentioned that Mrs. Newton Chapin, Mrs. Dudley Livingston, James W. Macfarlane and C. Morris Fitch were going to appear with the Sewickley Cot Club in "The Queen's Husband," October 27.

Rehearsals have now begun with some names added to the earlier list. Douglas Little, J. Reuben Rose, D. McCleane Taylor, Robert W. McKnight, J. Kemp Fuller and Charles A. Woods, Jr.

The play will be given this year in the Edgeworth Club instead of in the Sewickley Guild Hall, which burned down a few months ago.

PARIS DESIGNERS USE VARIED WAYS TO ADD SHOULDER WIDTH

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Sept. 20.—No matter what other rules of fashion may be made in Paris right now, there is one that tops them all; that is, that shoulders that are not wide must be made to look so. Every Paris couturier has his own favorite method for accomplishing this result. There are little capes, there are cap sleeves, there are wide yokes and big collars; all contribute to the fashion figure of 1933—slender lines that taper down and inwards from widened shoulders.

* * *

MADAME POUTERMAN, the young Russian designer who heads the house of Lyolene, makes a very definite effort to keep this wide-shouldered line a youthful one. Note how in both the Lyolene costumes in today's sketch the added shoulder-width is accompanied by the long slenderness of line so typical of young figures.

* * *

IN THE dress there is no contrasting touch of color to disturb the simplicity of the silhouette. The frock is made of thin black woolen, with incrustations forming the decoration on the blouse portion and developing into inverted plaits to give fullness to the skirt. The little puffs, high on the sleeves, are made to protrude upwards as well as outward from the shoulder.

* * *

ON THE coat, a tiny shoulder cape cut in one with the front and the back give width to the top. The red-and-white dotted pattern of the silk lining is repeated in the scarf, which escapes from the collarless neckline.

DRAMAS OF MARRIED LIFE . . . . . by Eva Greely

JANE LOOKS TERRIBLY RUN-DOWN. SHE REALLY WORKS TOO HARD
THE WAY SHE SLAVES OVER A WASHBOARD! NO WONDER SHE'S NEVER ABLE TO GO OUT WITH HER HUSBAND
AND HE LIKES GOOD TIMES SO—I MUST TELL HER ABOUT RINSO. THAT WILL CUT HER WORK IN TWO

"And once I thought my husband didn't care for me" says Ann

"I CAN see it all so plainly now," says this delighted young woman. "My husband thought that I was a typical 'stay-at-home'—because most of the time when he wanted to go out I was too tired to budge.

"I would have loved to go out with him, but washday just about used up all my energy. But that's all behind me now. A friend told me about Rinso, how it soaks clothes as clean and white as snow, without any hard scrubbing. I've been using it ever since and my husband can't get over how fresh and rested I am even on washdays."

Rinso saves time and work for millions of women every washday. Cup for cup, this famous "no-work" soap gives twice as much suds as light weight, puffed-up soaps—even in hardest water.

Saves clothes—saves hands

Rinso is safe for your finest cottons and linens—white or colors. That's why it is recommended by the makers of 40 leading washing machines. And Rinso suds are so easy on the hands—they don't get that red, washworn look. That's why millions of women will use nothing else for dishwashing. Grease disappears, as if by magic, in these creamy Rinso suds. Get the BIG package of Rinso today. It's economical—a little goes so far.

Bulletin Points To Busy College Club Year

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

If the first bulletin of the College Club is an indication of what the season is to hold, that new club house will be about the busiest spot in Pittsburgh this winter. The housewarming on Saturday will start the ball rolling; then comes the president's reception on October 7 and a bridge tea the next day when the membership committee will entertain new and prospective members.

The first meeting of the study groups is set for October 11, and the first speaker of the regular Friday afternoon series is William Codman, head designer for Gorham Company, silversmiths. The first class in music appreciation, a new interest, and the first professional women's dinner, another departure this year, are both down for October 18.

On Friday afternoon, the twenty-first, the Fire Flies (Letha Fazier Rankin, Jean McCrory Newman, Viola Byrgerson and Marian Clarke Bollinger) will give the program following a special business meeting. General readers will meet October 25 to hear Miss Alice T. McGirr; the first weekly meeting of a class in needlepoint is set for October 27; Congressman Clyde Kelly will address the meeting on the twenty-eighth and on the twenty-ninth there's a club dinner dance.

B. P. W. to Try For Perfect Fall Vote

More and more club women are awakening to political consciousness. Political questions are being studied and issues being discussed. And here and there organizations are taking an active interest in national questions. The latest to enter the active field is the National Federation of Business and Professional Women which has set a 100 per cent vote in the fall election, from its 60,000 members as its goal in a nation-wide get-out-the-vote campaign.

Radio broadcasts, noonday talks to women in department stores and industrial plants, discussion of campaign issues at special meetings, receptions to candidates and mock elections will be among the devices employed to interest business women.

Presidents of local B. P. W. clubs have been asked to cooperate and every member club has been asked to include a study of campaign issues in its fall program. Among the radio network speakers will be such prominent women as Congresswoman Ruth Baker Pratt, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Mrs. Ogden Reid, Mrs. Ellis A. Yost, former Gov. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Miss Sarah Scuyler Butler, Miss Frances Perkins, Mrs. Rheta Childe Dorr, Mrs. Henry Goddard Leach, Mrs. George A. RECORD SWEEP IN SOUTH FOR ROOSEVELT

By COLE E. MORGAN
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20. The Solid South seems to be full of remorse for what it did to the Democratic party four years ago. It looks as if the cotton country is going to roll up a Democratic majority this year that will be bigger than it has ever before given a Democratic presidential nominee.

This is the way it appears from a study of returns from that section in the nationwide presidential poll of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph in co-operation with all the other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States.

New returns tabulated today from the nine states reaching from South Carolina to Texas bring the totals from that area to 20,991 for Gov. Roosevelt to 3,184 for President Hoover. Adding North Carolina and Virginia shows 27,783 for Roosevelt and 4,972 for Hoover.

Roosevelt is getting 85 per cent of the total for the whole section and in no state as low as 70 per cent. That shows the South is about as near unanimous for the Democratic nominee as party managers could well expect. It's a far different story than four years ago.

ROOSEVELT'S MARGIN WIDENS

By COLE E. MORGAN
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—Gov. Roosevelt does not appear to need the "Solid South" to win this year's election, on the face of returns in the nation-wide postcard poll of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph in co-operation with all the other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States.

Eliminating the 10 states of the Democratic stronghold—Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas and Texas—all of which are certain to be found in the Democratic column this year, he can still muster an electoral college majority.

The poll response shows Roosevelt with 269 electoral votes safely to his credit in states where he is polling 60 per cent or more of the ballots. Of these, 113 are in the 10 Southern states. Deducting these 113 still leaves him 156, which is 110 short of the 266 necessary to elect. However, he has to his credit majorities, ranging between 51 and 59 per cent, in states with 117 electoral votes. These, plus the 156 apparently safe votes, give him a total of 273, or seven more than necessary to elect.

Presidential Trend by States

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—The tabulation that follows shows the total vote thus far recorded for President Hoover and Gov. Roosevelt in the nation-wide presidential poll of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph in co-operation with all the other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States. It also shows the majority that each candidate has in each state in which he is leading. In addition it gives the gain of each candidate on the latest returns received from each state as compared with the last preceding report from the state. These state reports are usually a week apart. The final feature of this table shows the net gain of each candidate in each state where he has improved his position as compared with the preceding report from that state.

How Old?

He doesn't look a day over fifty. And feels like forty.

At the age of 62.

That's the happy state of health and pep a man enjoys when he gives his vital organs a little stimulant!

When your system is stagnant and you feel sluggish, headachy, half-alive—don't waste money on "tonics" or "regulators" or similar patent medicines. Stimulate the liver and bowels. Use a famous physician's prescription every drug store keeps. Just ask them for Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin.

This appetizing syrup is made from fresh laxative herbs, active senna, and pure pepsin. One dose will clear up almost any case of headache, biliousness, constipation. But if you want to keep in fine shape, feel fit the year 'round, take a spoonful of Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin every few days. You'll eat better, sleep better and feel better in every way. You will never need to take another laxative.

Give the children a little of this delicious syrup two or three times a week. A gentle, natural stimulant that makes them eat and keeps the bowels from clogging. And saves them from so many sick spells and colds.

Have a sound stomach, active liver and strong bowel muscles that expel every bit of waste and poison every day! Just keep a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin on hand; take a stimulating spoonful every now and then. See if you don't feel new vigor in every way. Syrup pepsin isn't expensive.

Wind Takes Check From Skyscraper To Bank

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 20.—(AP.)—Henry S. Conrad, attorney, signed two checks in his ninth floor office of the National Fidelity Bank Building on the southwest corner of Tenth and Walnut streets.

A strong south wind whipped the checks from the hands of his secretary, out a window. The secretary telephoned the Commerce Trust Company, on the northwest corner of the same block, to stop payment.

An employe of the trust company soon telephoned Mr. Conrad:

"Your checks just blew in through the street door and up to the window of a paying teller, but we didn't cash them."

HILLIG GIVES UP OCEAN FLIGHT

LIBERTY, N. Y., Sept. 20.—(AP.)—Otto Hillig has abandoned for this year his plan to fly to Greece, because he wishes to "cooperate" with the federal government.

Although their plane was in readiness and their lunch basket partly filled, Hillig and his pilot, Roger Q. Williams, decided last night not to attempt the flight which they had expected to undertake this week.

Hillig said Williams flew to Liberty during the day, bringing permission from the Department of Commerce to make the flight, but also bringing an urgent request from the government not to attempt to cross the Atlantic in a plane this late in the season.

JAIL-BREAKER RE-ARRESTED

R. H. Neff, of 707 Chestnut street, North Side, said by police to have been sought since last March, when he mysteriously disappeared from Sewickley Police Station following his arrest on two charges of false pretense, was held today in county jail after he was re-arrested on the North Side.

Arrested last March, he was accused by Justice of the Peace Margaret Morgan of falsely soliciting advertising for a magazine issued by the Minor Judiciary Association. He was ordered held for court by Justice of the Peace A. W. McMillen, of Carnegie, and taken to the Sewickley jail. He escaped during the night.

Re-arrested by Motorcycle Officer George Brubach, he was taken before Justice Morgan, of Sewickley, and held for court after he is alleged to have refused to tell how he escaped jail. He was lodged in county jail in lieu of $2,000 bond.

ROBBERS SEIZE TAXICAB

Aloysius Siskey, of Colter street, Yellow cab driver, was robbed of a small amount of cash and his car early today on the William Penn highway, two miles east of Burke's Glen, by two fares he had picked up in downtown Pittsburgh. Both men were armed.

Siskey walked to Burke's Glen and reported the robbery to Pittsburgh police. He was unharmed.

After forcing Siskey to alight, the robbers drove the machine to Blairsville, where they accosted a resident. Becoming suspicious, he notified Blairsville police, who pursued the two men. Chased out of town, police said, the men drove the cab into a field and fled on foot.

VETS REUNITED AFTER 70 YRS.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 20.—(AP.)—It took 70 years to reunite four veterans of the Civil War after they had separated on a battlefield in the South.

They were together again today for the first time since, as boys in Blue, they charged up Missionary Ridge and became separated in the battle.

A hotel register brought them together during the sixty-sixth annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic.

All the way from Kansas came Hamilton Watkins, 85, of Cunningham, and A. P. Douthitt, of Winfield.

The two were startled to find the name of W. H. Morris, Williamstown, W. Va., and a little further down, that of Evan Foster, St. Paul.

The four, reunited for the first time since the Battle of Missionary Ridge, retired to "talk things over."

You Can't Have Dandruff Unless You Are Civilized

At a public gathering the other evening a well-groomed person sat in front of me. In general he was immaculate in appearance, yet on the collar of his dark suit were tell-tale specks of dandruff. He was aware of his affliction, and occasionally brushed his collar.

Dr. Copeland

Seborrheic dermatitis is the medical term for the familiar trouble called dandruff, one of the most common disorders of the scalp.

It is too bad that this ailment is so frequently neglected, because a bad case may lead to some serious disease of the hair and scalp. Loss of hair and baldness are believed by many authorities to be caused by an infection of the hair follicles, made possible by neglected and aggravated dandruff.

Dandruff is a disease of modern civilization, and is not found in primitive people. Although the cause has never been positively determined, it is believed to be due to an infection, and it is probable that it may be passed from one individual to another.

Dandruff occurs sometimes when the general health is poor. Lack of proper food, or use of food deficient in important vitamins and minerals, is an important factor. Lack of exercise and insufficient exposure of the hair to air and sunlight are possible causes that should be corrected.

Contrary to the popular belief, dandruff is not caused by frequent washing of the hair. Some hair requires frequent cleansing, while other hair seems to thrive without it. When the hair is oily it catches dust and dirt, and oily hair should be washed more frequently than dry hair.

If you have dandruff, remember that the best treatment is to keep the scalp clean and free from dandruff scales. The circulation of the blood of the scalp should be stimulated, for this will encourage the normal action of the sweat glands of the scalp.

A thorough shampoo with tincture of green soap is useful. During the shampoo, vigorously massage the scalp with your fingers. An ointment prescribed by your physician should be rubbed into the scalp after the shampoo.

Avoid wearing tight hats. Whenever possible, expose the hair to the soothing and beneficial action of the sun. Use your own brush and comb, and do not lend them to others. The comb and brush should be washed at least once a week.

In addition to the scalp treatment, every effort should be made to improve the general health. A diet containing abundant quantities of fresh fruits and vegetables will be helpful.

If eczema, psoriasis or ringworm is present, special treatment is necessary before the dandruff can be cured. Let your doctor advise you.

Answers to Health Queries

N. E. C. Q.—What do you advise for pimples and blackheads?

A.—Diet and elimination are important in the correction of this disorder. Send self-addressed stamped envelope for full particulars and repeat your question.

Women Shouldn't Want All Of Husbands' Time

Are you a golf widow—?

Or maybe a golf hound?

Whichever you are, lend your ear, while Olga pours out what she thinks about things like that. What she thinks is plenty. But do you okey her ideas?

Has a husband a right to go out 'n' bounce the li'l white pill around—alone—while Friend Wife, who can bounce 'em herself, and would like to play a twosome, sits home, keeping the lunch in the warming oven?

"I don't think he has!" she cries. "I think he should take me along. In fact, I think he should devote all his time to me!"

"Dear Miss Martin—

"I wish you would help me. I am very anxious to know what attitude I should take toward my husband, and his golf.

"We have been married for eight years, and he has very few faults, I will admit. But he insists on playing golf, at least twice a week, and occasionally, though not very often, he wants to go some place with other men he knows. Some place where I can't go.

"Now I don't like this. I believe his time should be entirely devoted to me. We have no children, and I think he should take me out when he goes. I like to play golf, too, and I am perfectly willing to go with him and play with him . . . or to go other places where we could go together.

"And there is another thing. When he plays, he is usually gone so long that it messes things all up. He almost always wants to play 18 holes instead of nine. So when he goes, I never know just when he will be back. I have had to keep lunch waiting for him until the middle of the afternoon, and I don't like that at all. I don't think he should do it.

A SERIOUS MATTER

"All this may sound very foolish to you, but it is really serious to me, so please don't throw this letter out. I am terribly anxious to know what you think about it and how you think I should handle this situation. So you see a lot depends on your reply.

"Please help me, won't you? What do you think?

"I will be looking for your answer. "OLGA."

What do I think?

Several things, lady, and you may not like some of 'em. You're partly right, of course, when you say that your husband should take you out when he goes to play golf—sometimes. There is no reason why you shouldn't occasionally play with him. If you can play well enough—and can be an agreeable companion while you play.

A HUSBAND'S RIGHT

But your notion that he should devote all his time to you is haywire, lady. And if you hang on to it, and nag him because he doesn't, you'll drive him away entirely. He has a perfect right to amuse himself by himself—or with his men friends, now and then. He not only has a right to do it, but it is necessary that he should.

He needs association and fun with other folks to stay healthy-minded . . . and so do you. He needs to play, with other men, just as you need to play, with other women. So snap out of it. Stop trying to tie him down. Get outside yourself, and outside the narrow circle of yourselves. Find something to be interested in, and to make you interesting. Study what's going on in the world around you. Think about what it means. Talk about it. Give him something to make him want you around. For I suspect he leaves you alone because you've nothing to offer him. You think of nothing but yourself and him. You've turned yourself in on yourself—and no woman—or man—who does that can hold another's interest.

Stop making marriage a prison, and begin to make it an interesting adventure . . . and you won't be able to pry him loose from your side.

There Must Be More Than Beauty to Succeed in Life, Says Fay King

BEAUTY MAY ATTRACT A MAN BUT CHARM HOLDS HIM
NOT ALL BEAUTIFUL GIRLS ARE "DUMB"
A GIRL MAY BE AS SMART AS SHE IS PRETTY TAE-LING

By FAY KING

Personally I know a dozen girls whom any artist, author or stage director would select as an ideal beauty.

They have brains and ability to hold important positions. Beauty is secondary with them.

Not all beautiful girls are dumb.

When beauty succeeds on the stage, in business or home life you will always find that she has brains and charm as well as perfection of face and figure.

Beauty attracts at first glance, but there must always be more than mere beauty to succeed and inspire lasting devotion.

That the plainest girl may grow lovelier the longer you know her proves the power and importance of that beauty which can only come from within and which is needed to enhance even the loveliest face.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Collectors of sun tan are forewarned! Let them take heed and there will be less beauty bawling next winter. The complexion that is toasted brown is the one that is going to be rough and chapped when the sweet and silly season has run its course. Sunburn destroys the delicacy of the skin. If the epidermis is blistered time and again, it gets sore, grows a thick leathery hide, which will disqualify a gal from marching in the beauty parade. Keep the oily cream at hand. Protect the face with a hat that projects a poke bonnet brim. That class of lid is chic, piquant and sassy, and it throws a shadow which means that the complexion won't heap itself full of freckles or turn to beige.

Time now to think of buying winter shoes. Pass up those cute little kicks with thin soles and high heels. Get walking shoes that will protect the feet from cold pavements. You don't take cold? That's not the idea. Heavy, protective shoes are necessary to keep your nose beautifully and romantically pale. Chill your feet and your nose reddens. That's all.

Hints for the Household

There are so many countless uses for bits of cotton that the new convenient way in which it is packed offers interesting possibilities. Every dressing table should be equipped with a container of cotton for manicuring, removing bits of lip rouge, rubbing down the too strong makeup, smoothing over the eye shadow, refreshing the skin with astringents. This new arrangement for holding the cotton provides a way of pulling off just the nice little tuft that is needed without touching any of the rest of the cotton. The sanitary advantages are obvious. The cotton is held in a carton that has a tightly fitted top, in which a small opening permits the cotton to be pulled through as one would thread from a spool.

Cut flowers last longer when a little salt or soda is put in the water.

A few drops of salad oil in the water when rinsing chamois or doeskin gloves will keep them soft.

Distempered walls which are stained with grease can be cleaned with a paste of fuller's earth and water.

If one part of beef drippings to three parts of lard is used for a frying mixture sodden food will be avoided.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

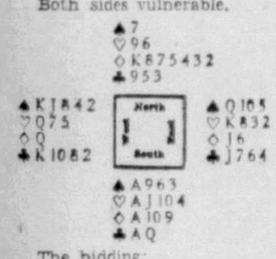
Beware of Traps

When the Declarer deliberately presents his opponents with a trick or tricks, it is well for the opponents to stop, look and listen before they accept the Grecian gift. The defending side, if the Declarer is a good player, may do well to ponder that it may be simply a case of "casting bread upon the waters," expecting a manifold return later.

Mr. Frank Walker, of Jacksonville, Fla., was the Declarer on the hand below, in which, through a clever ruse, he was enabled to make his contract.

South—Dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

West had a difficult choice of a lead, but elected to play his fourth best spade, and when the Dummy went down, the Declarer studied his holdings carefully. If he could have traded the Ten of Diamonds in his own hand for one of Dummy's small diamonds, the making of the hand, as well as the making of overtricks, would have been comparatively simple, but unfortunately his own holding blocked the run of that suit, even though he found a favorable distribution. Nor could he afford to concede a trick in diamonds at once, if West held five spades, as, if West then obtained the lead, the contract must be defeated.

So reasoning, he planned the play of the hand. He retained the Ace of spades until the third round, and then laid down the Ace of diamonds. As the cards lay, he could now safely concede a trick in diamonds to East and make game, but this plan would be foiled if West had held originally the Queen-Knave and the Queen was a false-card. South weighed the respective chances, and then decided that his safest course was to put West in with his last spade and trust that he would continue to run the suit and give him an opportunity to discard his blocking card. Sure enough, West did so, and South thus made his contract.

South's plan of campaign was brilliant and based upon the sound assumption that a player in the lead will take an established trick. However, had West risen to the heights of correct defense, the Declarer's brilliant plan would have been frustrated. In weighing the respective chances, I am inclined to think that the sounder play, after permitting the opponents to win 2 spade tricks and laying down the Ace of diamonds, would have been to assume that East probably held the remaining diamond, rather than West, and immediately to concede him a trick in that suit.

Either plan risked failure, as West could defeat South's brilliant strategy by refusing to lead his last spade, while the plan of playing the diamonds would have been ineffective had West, and not East, held two diamonds. The decision was a close one, but in any event, South's strategy was bound to succeed against any except a master player.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Mrs. Culbertson will be glad to answer any specific question on bidding or play sent in by readers. Address her in care of this newspaper, inclosing a three-cent stamped self-addressed envelope.

TODAY'S QUESTION

South, Dealer, bids one heart. West doubles and North passes. What should East now bid, holding the following hand:

♠ K 5 4 3 ♡ 5 4 ◇ K J 10 4 2 ♣ A 3

Answer—Two spades. The hand contains 2½ honor-tricks and hence justifies a Jump Response to the Takeout Double. The spade suit should be bid in preference to the diamond suit, as it is to be assumed that the doubler is prepared for a spade response.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Theater Form

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

If two couples go to a moving picture theater, should the two girls go in the row first? How should they sit—together, or should they leave a seat between them for one of the boys?

As they leave the row, should the boys go first or the girls? Or do they leave just as they are sitting? D.

It is easier and simpler if one girl goes in the row first and a boy goes next; then the second girl, and last the second boy. The first boy, before he enters the row, should ask permission of the second girl, "Shall I go in next?"

As they leave the row they proceed as they were sitting. In the aisle the two boys stand back a bit and let the girls precede them up the aisle.

Friendship Trinket

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I met a young man about a month ago, who was visiting in this city. The night before he left he took a trinket of mine for friendship. He has been gone a month and I have not heard from him. Should I write and ask him to return the trinket or let him return it of his own accord?

A CONSTANT READER.

If you think that he will return it of his own accord, I suggest that you wait for him to do this. But evidently you have doubts about this, and if your doubts are real, and if you really wish to have the trinket returned, then there is no recourse but to write a note.

OUTLAW OF THE JUNGLE . . . "Nature in the Raw"—as portrayed by the great animal painter, Paul Bransom . . . inspired by the leopard's fierce fighting power and relentless hunt for prey which makes him the terror of every beast of the African jungle.

Copr. 1932, The American Tobacco Co.

—and raw tobaccos have no place in cigarettes

They are not present in Luckies ...the mildest cigarette you ever smoked

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

"It's toasted"

That package of mild Luckies

"If a man write a better book, preach a better sermon, or make a better mouse-trap than his neighbor, tho he build his house in the woods, the world will make a beaten path to his door."—RALPH WALDO EMERSON.

Does not this explain the world-wide acceptance and approval of Lucky Strike?

INSULL FAVORS MAY BE BARED

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—(INS.)—The favored list of "preferred clients" who reportedly reaped fortunes by buying stock in Samuel Insull's companies at bargain prices may be brought into the public limelight, it was indicated today.

Through the medium of a Federal investigation of the two-billion dollar Insull utilities collapse, the names of these privileged investors would emerge to become known to the thousands of lesser persons who paid full market prices for the securities, to their ultimate loss.

That a Federal investigation of the Insull debacle is a possibility was learned on good authority following the return from Washington of United States District Attorney Dwight H. Green. The prosecutor would admit no more than that he had discussed the matter informally with Attorney General Mitchell. But, it was learned that preparations are complete for the beginning of a Federal inquiry, should one be ordered.

POLITICS

G.O.P. Fears Democrats May Carry Penna.

By MARK SHIELDS

At the Republican State Committee meeting at Allentown on Saturday, and the picnic later which opened the state campaign with Vice President Curtis as the keynote speaker, there was an undercurrent almost unprecedented in Pennsylvania politics.

Mr. Shields

There was present a thinly-disguised fear that the Democrats might carry the state, and that certainly the Republicans would lose several congressional seats. No partisan mind was required to sense this sentiment.

It was provided by the expressions of Republican leaders themselves, the men in from surrounding counties who commented on prospects in their sections. Hardly one but who expressed himself as concerned about the advantage of Mr. Hoover over Gov. Roosevelt.

What was more disturbing to the state leadership, not many were disposed to get worked up over the head of the ticket, but all wanted to get assistance for their local candidates. Such an attitude is not encouraging to the state leadership, anxious to make a showing for Mr. Hoover, desirous of standing well with Washington in the event the Republicans should remain in power after March 4, 1933.

* * *

State Leadership Inspires No Enthusiasm

Yet the impression was gained that the perturbation of the state leaders was the least of the troubles of the local chiefs. Indeed, there was more than a suspicion from things dropped here and there that a rebuff for the state leadership would not be displeasing. There can be no concealment of the fact that the leadership, if not in disfavor, at least is not highly regarded, and inspires no enthusiasm.

State Chairman Martin intimated after the state committee had adopted its really wet plank that this was the goal toward which the leadership had been striving, but that not until now was the time opportune, that to have attempted something of the kind last May would have been hurtful for ultimate success.

If this was the case, certainly the state chairman until he made his last visit to Philadelphia was a master at concealing motives. It was only after that series of conferences with William S. Vare and his associates that there was an open disposition on the part of Gen. Martin to accept the wet plank. It was done because local leaders in big counties insisted that there must be a clear-cut pronouncement on the subject, not so much for Mr. Hoover, but to save state tickets.

Vare, though entitled to feel bitterly toward the President for more than one real slight, is reported to be doing the best he can for Hoover in Philadelphia. He is actuated, also, by the fear of a repetition of 1928, when Democratic legislators were elected in South Philadelphia, and Vare's own sister-in-law was beaten for the state Senate in a district which had been represented by a Vare for years.

Despite this determination, there are predictions that Hoover will not carry Philadelphia by any better than 100,000, much less than half the normal deliverable Republican majority.

* * *

Same Stories Come From Other Counties

Other counties have the same story, and Lackawanna County is reported so uncertain that the Mayor of Scranton is said to have refrained from attending the Republican State Committee meeting because he did not wish to be associated with any public indorsement of President Hoover, fearing that would be bad for his own political future.

It is almost inconceivable that Pennsylvania, with its traditional million majority for a Republican presidential candidate, can go Democratic. Yet the Lehigh-Bucks congressional district may go Democratic by 15,000, the Erie district is offering plenty of grief for the incumbent, Milton Shreve; Westmoreland County is fighting territory in the congressional fight, and the Clarion, Elk-Franklin-Venango-Cambria section is far from a Republican sinecure.

There will be five Republican congressmen from Allegheny County, unless a miracle occurs, but the vote for these congressmen will be larger than the vote for Mr. Hoover. There is even less disposition on the part of local leaders to hold their lines for Hoover this year than in 1928, when they hesitated to persuade some followers against voting for Al Smith.

Gen. Martin quite frankly stated at the committee meeting that a real campaign loomed, and that every unit of the party must do its level best—with little money—to deliver a victory. That in itself was revealing, but the real revelations came about hotel lobbies and at the picnic grounds, especially the latter, where many of the crowd—and no one could deny it was a large one—wondered what Vice President Curtis' defense of the Fordney-McCumber tariff of 1921 had to do with present conditions.

RELIEF BURDEN HERE PUT AT $12,000,000

Welfare Fund Leader Makes Plea for Its $3,000,000 Budget

Declaring more than one-third of the working population of Allegheny County to be unemployed, W. P. Witherow, chairman of the 1932 Welfare Fund campaign, today estimated the minimum city and county relief burden for 1933 at $12,000,000.

Witherow appealed for generous contributions by the public to the campaign, whose budget this year is $3,000,000, half of last year's. He said:

"With Allegheny County's unemployed now numbering 190,000, more than one-third of the normal working population, it is not pessimism, but intelligent foresight to prepare for a heavy increase in emergency needs which will come this winter.

RELIEF YEAR AWAY

"There is hope that before another year is over, the forces of reconstruction will be able to report progress.

"Relief, alone, will not save the community this winter.

"We must maintain health, hold morale, safeguard the welfare of children, preserve human values and continue the training of boys and girls.

"Nine million dollars for direct material relief will have to be secured from public funds—city, county, state, federal.

"Three million dollars of our total welfare budget in Allegheny County must be raised through voluntary contributions to the Welfare Fund. This we must have to assure the wise handling of relief funds, to carry on health work and prevent sickness, to care for dependent children, to safeguard the community against crime and delinquency and to build good citizens and good parents.

RESERVES TAPPED

"Corporations are being asked to dip into reserves in support of this program. Individuals able to give in large amounts are being asked to give from principal, rather than income. Gifts from income alone will not carry us through.

"This is not only charity but enlightened self-interest.

The County Poor Directors were to meet with the County Commissioners today in an effort to come to an understanding over the proposed sale of Poor Board bonds for county relief work.

County Commissioner C. M. Barr was to attend, committed against approving a bond issue until its constitutionality is approved by the State Supreme Court. While the other two commissioners have not definitely stated their stands, relief leaders held only slight hopes that the bond issue would be approved.

HEARING FIXED IN 19TH WARD CASES

Healy Will Make His Defense in Court Tomorrow

Constable John Healy, of the Nineteenth Ward, today had lottery informations against five Mt. Washington men on file before Alderman Edward W. Haas, of West Liberty avenue, the result of J. A. McArdle's effort to be relieved as Healy's bondsman.

Following a hearing in Quarter Sessions Court yesterday, where it was testified that Healy was cognizant of much of the vice prevalent in the ward, Healy filed the informations. A hearing has been set for Thursday night. Two of the accused have posted bond.

BRIBE OFFER CHARGED

During the hearing before Judge Frank P. Patterson, who had caused the probe of laxity by constables, it was charged Healy said he had been offered $100 a month to protect a speakeasy. Healy will make his defense in court tomorrow.

Various charges were made against Healy yesterday when a hearing was started on the petition of J. A. McArdle, son of Councilman Peter J. McArdle, to withdraw as bondsman for the constable.

McArdle said the constable has not closed clubs where liquor is sold and has allowed numbers writers to operate. He said he had turned over to Healy a list of clubs, giving addresses.

NUMBERS RACKET

One witness, Thomas K. Dunn, of 114 Cohasset street, said Constable Healy asked him to give the latter a list of the number writers, "so that he could cut in."

Judge Patterson asked what he meant by "cut in."

Dun answered:

"So he could get part of the graft."

Dunn added he did not get the list.

At this point Judge Patterson sent for a stenographer and had a record made of the testimony. Dunn named several persons he said sold numbers and named the Working Men's Club, Nineteenth Ward Republican Club, Skookum Club and Maennerchor Club as places he said where liquor was sold.

Blair Schuler, a deputy constable, testified he knew a list of alleged violators had been given Healy, and not acted upon. He named the same clubs and said the chief numbers "pick-up man" was named Lauderbaugh, and that he drove every noon in an automobile bearing license No. 62791, to in front of John's drug store to pick up money from numbers writers.

CLUB RAID FAILS

Schuler told of one raid on the Italian Republican Club, Sycamore street, which he said had been tipped off beforehand, so that only near beer was found.

Mrs. George Soffel, of 109 Sycamore street, Republican ward vice chairman, testified Healy had told her he had been offered $100 a month not to molest the Italian Republican Club. She said Healy told her he was too old to conduct raids. She replied:

"You mean you are afraid."

To which she said he answered: "Yes."

Mrs. Soffel said the liquor from the club was taken to a grocery store next door before the raid and is still being dispensed from there.

BIDS ON SCHOOL JOB LOOM

To relieve congestion in South Side high schools, bids will probably be asked by the Board of Public Education to complete the construction of the second floor of Overbrook Junior High School, at an approximate cost of $22,000.

Collections of school taxes are $900,000 behind this period last year, according to a report to the board. Operating with 12 less supervisors and 45 less teachers, the board will save $150,000. Enrollment in secondary schools is 2,500 more than last year.

Assistant Solicitor J. C. McIlwain will be asked today if the board can provide food for needy children attending parochial schools. A letter from the Rev. John J Grearney, of the Annunciation School, North Side, said there were about 70 pupils in that school needing food. He said a similar condition prevailed in St. Francis de Sales School, North Side.

Mt. Lebanon Sells $750,000 Bond Issue

Mt. Lebanon Township Commissioners today announced the sale of $750,000 in commissioners' bonds to the firm of Leach Brothers, of Philadelphia, to finance township improvements.

The bonds, bearing 4½ per cent interest, were substituted for certificates which had formerly been issued at 6 per cent.

COAL HAUL RATE FIGHT PUSHED

The Western Pennsylvania Coal Traffic Bureau late yesterday asked the Interstate Commerce Commission to grant a hearing on its refusal to allow reduced rates on coal from mines on the Pittsburgh and West Virginia Railway to Cleveland, Huron and Lorain. This action forecast another freight rate battle between Ohio and Western Pennsylvania coal operators. The Coal Traffic Bureau represents operators in the Pittsburgh section and the Connellsville and Freeport regions.

The commission suspended a proposed reduction in rates September 8. This would have restored the former 10-cent differential between rates on the Pittsburgh and West Virginia and the Wheeling and Lake Erie roads.

W. Aliquippa Girl Swallows Poison

ALIQUIPPA, Pa., Sept. 20.—Helen Huey, 22, of 606 McKee avenue, West Aliquippa, is in a critical condition in Rochester General Hospital at Rochester as the result of swallowing poison at her home early today, according to police.

Pinchot Appoints 4 to Relief Boards

HARRISBURG, Sept. 20.—Gov. Gifford Pinchot, today announced these appointments to county relief boards: Beaver, Robert Lloyd, of Midland; Blair, John F. Weller, of Altoona; Clearfield, William R. Gallagher, of Houtzdale, and Erie, Harry Auer, of Corry.

SURVEY SHOWS PUPILS' NEEDS

A survey of the needs of Pittsburgh grade school children, reported to Dr. Ben G. Graham, superintendent of schools, today revealed that more than 5,813 need shoes.

But many need more than that, the survey shows.

Over 4,200 need other apparel; nearly 9,000 need milk, and 4,674 require food in addition to milk.

Dr. Graham explained:

"The survey was made during the first 10 days of school, among 65,000 students in the elementary grades. These estimates do not include the children attending secondary schools. It is likely that the figures will have to be amended, as time goes on, and the needs of the children grow. I believe the report is very conservative."

The report of students in the high schools will be made next week, he added.

Rip V. Brookhart Hears of Doings In Wall Street

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Senator Brookhart is just suspecting there have been stock abuses in Wall Street.

Where has the Senator been all this time? In the upper berth over Rip Van Winkle?

Our own suspicions have been ripening on the vine for three years. There was something fishy about that market and it wasn't trout.

We don't accuse those droll little margineers of anything. Like the man in the dental chair, we arrived of our own volition.

It is better to have plunged and bounced than never to have bounced at all. If Senator Brookhart insists on his postponed autopsy, why, of course, the writer willingly gives the body of his broker to science.

But, the grass has grown over that battlefield Senator. And, like Lee, Bismark, Grant and Wellington, the best we can hope for is to be paid off in monuments.

TISDAL ACCEPTS NOMINATION

ELK CITY, Okla., Sept. 20.—It was a Cox and Tisdal day in this western town yesterday. Indians and cowboys were among the audience that turned out to hear the two jobless party candidates.

Dr. Victor C. Tisdal officially accepted the vice presidential nomination. In his speech he urged an "even break" for the farmer and more practical education for the poor boy, to teach him a vocation.

Father Cox said:

"Our presidents have all been from the eastern part of the United States. Presidents have been selected from the Middle West, but the real West has never been recognized until the jobless party selected Dr. Victor C. Tisdal."

Father Cox and his campaign party will swing into Texas today. Only one meeting is planned for that state. On Thursday following a night meeting in Albuquerque, N. M., Father Cox will fly to Pittsburgh.

PIN IN APPENDIX, BABY SAVED

A 2-year-old girl who has made a habit of swallowing buttons, tacks and other objects, was recovering today in Children's Hospital from her latest illness. She is Louise Brownley, of 1115 Church avenue, McKees Rocks.

Physicians at the hospital who operated on her found a pin in her appendix.

Louise was taken to the hospital August 1, with an abscess on her right side. The doctors were puzzled. They treated her and tried to discover the trouble, but in vain.

X-rays were then taken and on the plates they quickly discovered the trouble. An immediate operation was performed and the pin was removed.

Life is sparkling anew for little Louise now, and she will be ready to leave the hospital this week.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Sept. 20. To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

I been out of town working, and missed an old friend that was out here, Josephus Daniels. He was out here spreading some Roosevelt bait. He is a grand old man, is "Uncle Joe," and he ought to know Roosevelt, who worked for him six years. Did see Mayor Curley, however. He runs the great city of Boston without an investigation. Curley sincerely believes Roosevelt will carry 48 states. I haven't heard from my good friend Amon Carter, of Texas. Am afraid he is taking politics too serious, for he was awfully able and entertaining before.

Will Rogers

California's having more fog than ever in its history. I arrived here during a Democratic administration and it was sunny and bright, so there goes Hoover again. Fire, fog, and lack of rain are liable to lose him the state. Some guy invented "vitamin A" out of a carrot. I'll bet he can't invent a good meal out of one.

Yours,
WILL ROGERS.

MISS LOUISE IN CHILDREN'S HOSPITAL . . . SHE SWALLOWS THINGS AND A PIN LODGED IN HER APPENDIX, PAINED HER

Walsh, Police Minstrel, Loses Fight for Life

Lieut. William J Walsh's long battle for life was at an end today.

Walsh, 42, one of the most colorful characters of the Police Department, died yesterday afternoon in Mercy Hospital from illness which kept him in the hospital for months.

Walsh, organizer and end man in minstrel shows staged for the Police Pension Fund, was a nephew of Police Superintendent Peter P. Walsh. For the last few years the lieutenant's sons, Willie and Jack, played juvenile roles in the minstrels.

Walsh was a member of the force for 18 years. He was ordained at the age of 9, and reared by Supt Walsh. He lived with his family at 528 Natchez street, Mt. Washington. He leaves his wife and four children.

WIDOW REVEALS TATE WAS FIRED ON BEFORE SLAYING

Annette Kellerman!

SHAPELY ANNETTE KELLERMAN . . . BACK IN THE TANKS

Miss Kellerman—the same who a decade or two ago created sensations with her one-piece bathing suits, her shape and her swimming and diving, pictured at Paris as she "comes back," her figure rounded by maturity but the envy of France's girls. She's diving and swimming every day in another act, similar to the old one. This is an International News Photograph Service picture.

SUSPECTED SON OF ORIGINAL ATTEMPT

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Sept. 20.—A few weeks before he was slain in an ambush in the mountains east of Haydentown, Isley S. Tate, aged mountaineer, escaped death by the fraction of an inch.

As he was moving through the woods near his goat farm, about a mile up the ridge from where he died, Tate was a target for a rifle bullet that whizzed close to his face. He searched the mountains in vain for hours in search of his attempted assassin.

Three of his sons are held on murder charges in connection with his slaying last week. They are George, 19; John, 20, and Sam, 15.

SUSPECTED SON

This story was told yesterday by Mrs. Nettie Miller Tate, his widow, before she left the home of a friend in Haydentown, where she had visited during the funeral of her husband. She said:

"He sort of suspected George, as the two had threatened each other. George told Sam he was going to blow out the old man's brains if he didn't lay off of him."

"Daddy," as the widow referred to Tate, had told her, she said, that he was going to get rid of George as he wasn't any good for anything.

DISCIPLINE STERN

Punishment awaited the three boys if they were not at home by 9 o'clock at night, and hickory clubs and blacksnake whips were used by Tate to enforce the discipline, his widow said. She declared:

"They had to get permission from him to go to Bruceton Mills."

The mother who soon is to bring her twelfth child into the world, has but once employed the services of a physician. She related:

"That's when John, my first child was born.

"After that I just called in the neighbors or got some one from Haydentown to stay with me when babies came. Catherine Elsie there (pointing to the eldest girl, aged 17), can take care of me this time as she has in the past.

"Only one time since I have been married and that was when John came have we had a doctor in our house. It's mighty healthy up where we live and we never have any use for doctors."

TELLS OF BEATINGS

Mrs. Tate said she was the only one in the family who didn't call her husband "the old man." She declared:

"I always called him daddy.

"Daddy has beaten all of us, but George most of all.

"He even beat me. I guess it was because he was jealous."

As she started up the road of jagged rocks toward the home on the hill she said she would live up there for a while anyhow—"until things got straightened out."

CHUBBIE BALKS AT MARRIAGE, FLIER HINTS

MIAMI, Fla., Sept. 20.—(AP.)—James J. Forrester, of the Federal Labor Department, said today he had learned that Capt. William N. Lancaster, British war flier and figure in the love trangle which collapsed with the death of Haden Clarke, plans to marry Mrs. Jessie M. Keith-Miller—the woman in the case.

The marraige date, set for the "earliest possible moment" by Lancaster in his statement to Forrester, is contingent on the British pilot obtaining a divorce from a wife in England.

SEEKS MOTHER'S CONSENT

Forrester said:

"Capt. Lancaster said he understood Mrs. Lancaster had applied for a divorce and that this may have been granted without his knowledge."

He quoted Lancaster:

"I intend to marry Mrs. Keith-Miller whether she wants to or not."

Forrester conducted Labor Department deporations hearings for both, and his reports await adjudication in Washington.

Lancaster is in Waterbury, Vt., seeking the consent of his mother to the proposed union, Forrester said. The flier gained his freedom on bond of $500, set after service of the Labor Department deportation warrant upon him August 19, three days after his acquittal on the murder charge growing out of the death of Clarke.

AVIATRIX SELLS FURNITURE

Service of the warrant, issued on Forrester's affidavit last June that the couple was illegally within the United States, was delayed that it might not prejudice the murder case, Forrester said.

Mrs. Keith-Miller, according to the Labor Department agent, is in New York disposing of her apartment and furniture there.

Speakeasies Forever, Says Dorothy Parker

Even Repeal Won't End 'Institution,' Poet Declares

By MARGARET LANE
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—"No, speakeasies won't pass. I think we've grown too fond of them. After repeal, I don't think they'll even change their names."

Dorothy Parker, that tiny dark-haired New Yorker, poet and author, whose work is a small, flawless mirror of New York and our times, tucked her feet under her and refused to lament the future passing of the speakeasy because, as she believes it, passing is one thing that the American speakeasy will never do. She said:

"After repeal, of course, the liquor will be better, and we shan't be peeped at quite so much through keyholes, but that will be the only difference. The food in speakeasies was always good. And there's a sort of pleasant intimacy, a privacy that you don't get in any European restaurant. They've become so much a part of American life that they're not a matter of prohibition any longer. They're just the sort of places New Yorkers like to eat and drink in.

"New York's speakeasies are the most genuine part of New York's night life.

"Its night clubs are desolate. They are dark and doubtful looking, and the whole essence of what is called 'night life' is bright lights and gaiety.

"In London, people put on their party clothes before trying to have a party. Here we all go out in hats and coats all the same color, and look as dull as bats.

"The nicest thing repeal will probably do, will be to make people considerably more sober and encourage them to dress more attractively. When one's favorite place to eat and drink is no longer a secret hole and corner, the prospect of dressing in the evening will be far more attractive than now."

The speakeasy, she prophesies, has only recently "come out" in New York society, and is set for a fine career even after prohibition is dead and gone.

Extending her hand in a mock-prom hostess gesture of goodbye, she said:

"Of course, I never was in one of these places myself, you understand. But a girl hears things.

"And, I have brothers."

PAY CUT ANEW IN WILKINSBURG

Further salary reductions and enforced furloughs for borough employes, voted last night by Wilkinsburg Council, are expected to save the borough $5,000 within the next three months, according to the finance committee. The borough is "nearly broke," according to Burgess William Turner.

Economy measures proposed at last night's meeting cut the borough building janitor from $135 to $100 a month, put the borough engineer and plumbing inspector on half salary, ordered all employes receiving more than $75 a month to work three days each month without pay and requested the elective officers—the burgess, controller and tax collector—to accept voluntarily a 12½ per cent slash in salary and commissions.

A proposal to reduce the hourly rate of street laborers from 55 to 50 cents an hour was rejected by Council after it was determined the weekly wage for the 14 such employes did not exceed $22.

STRIKE REPORT SENT CAPITAL

The strike of hoisting engineers on the new Postoffice continues today with few signs to indicate a truce.

The strike has been on since July 13. The Postoffice job itself complies with the demands of the engineers' union, but the strike is against John L. Mullen and the Building Trades Employers' Association, who have refused to accept the union's interpretation of an agreement to use union engineers on sand and gravel hoists.

A report of the Chamber of Commerce supporting the contractors has been sent to the federal authorities at Washington. M. Emmiline Pitt, conciliator for the Department of Labor, is reported also in Washington.

John Douglas, Jr., who has organized a new firm known as the Union Sand Company and received the approval of the engineers' union, is hauling gravel from the disputed wharf site on the Allegheny River, near the foot of Stanwix street.

He is using equipment which turned out to be owned by other interests when the city attempted to attach it for a rental bill they claimed Douglas owed for space in the Exposition Building.

POLICE HOLDUP CHARGE FAILS

Two Duquesne youths today stood acquitted of attempting to rob Patrolman William Connelly, of the McKeesport police department. A jury in Criminal Court before Visiting Judge Alfred Swoyer, of Wayne County, returned a not guilty verdict yesterday. The defendants were William Shaffer, 22, and Roy Crawford, 25. Shaffer was found guilty on a charge of carrying firearms.

Connelly testified they accosted him with a revolver in front of 1411 Fifth avenue, McKeesport, forced him into his car and ordered him to drive them to Greensburg. He signaled two other policemen who arrested the pair after they had gone two blocks, according to Connelly.

The youths testified they told the policeman they were without funds and he offered to take them down the street to get them something to eat.

JOAN M'DONALD WEDS, PREMIER AT CEREMONY

WENDOVER, BUCKINGHAMSHIRE, England., Sept. 20. — (AP.) — The little Congregational Church in this picturesque village was packed to its capacity of 400 today when Dr. Joan MacDonald, daughter of the Prime Minister, was married to a fellow student of her college days in Edinburgh, Dr. Alastair Mackinnon.

Her father came over from his country place at Chequers and gave the bride away. It was a great occasion for the village people. Many of them left their work early to obtain places from which they might watch the bridal procession.

CHILDREN CHEER

An enormous streamer hung across the main street bearing the words, "Good Wishes." The school children, who were given a holiday, lined the roadway to the church and cheered the wedding party when it arrived.

Inside the church, which was decorated with lilies and chrysanthemums from the gardens at Chequers and with white heather from Scotland, Isobel MacDonald, the bride's sister, acted as mistress of ceremonies.

The bride was attended by four bridesmaids wearing white satin. Her own gown was of heavy crepe silk, patterned with white and gold roses, leaves and butterflies, with a train falling from the waist.

She wore a half-moon shaped Tudor headdress and carried a bouquet of white roses.

HONEYMOON SECRET

The place of their honeymoon has been kept secret, but it was believed they would go to the Continent, where both were planning to carry out some work in medical research.

The bride spent three weeks here to comply with the necessary residence requirements before marriage. She spent last night at Chequers and came over today with her father. She is the first bride married from Chequers since that estate has been the residence of Great Britatin's prime minister.

The bride is 23, a few years younger than her husband. They met while both were students in surgery at the Royal Infirmary, Edinburgh. He proposed to her when Miss MacDonald was a bridesmaid at his sister's wedding, two years ago, but Joan would not be married until she had passed her examinations, which she did only a few weeks ago.

'TRUNK SLAYER' GAINS AS SHE WAITS FATE

International News Service.

PHOENIX, Ariz., Sept. 20.—Winnie Ruth Judd, convicted "trunk murderess" probably will not know whether she must hang until next spring.

Her appeal from conviction was on file today with the State Supreme Court, and attorneys for the state have 90 days in which to file their answer. After the state's answer is filed, defense attorneys have 20 days in which to respond. The Supreme Court will then set a date for argument.

GAINING WEIGHT

Meanwhile, shut away from the world, the so-called "Tiger Woman" is gaining weight, and the tautly-drawn nerves which resulted in several outbreaks during her trial have quieted under the routine of the Arizona State Prison at Florence.

Reports from the prison stated that Mrs. Judd has gained 11 pounds in the 10 months she has been confined there. Her hair has become darker, and no difficulty has been encountered by prison authorities in handling her case. She does not occupy the death cell, but mingles with other women inmates of the prison.

FEW VISITORS

At her own request she sees only her parents, the Rev. and Mrs. H. J. McKinnell, who moved to Florence from their Indiana home so they could be near their daughter, and a woman church worker who has interested herself in Mrs. Judd's case.

Mrs. Judd is represented as being confident that she will win her appeal for a new trial.

Seventeen points of law were advanced by her attorneys as grounds for the reversal of the conviction which resulted in her being sentenced to hang for the murder of Agnes Anne Leroi. She was also indicted for the murder of Miss Hedvig Samuelson, but tried only on the one charge.

Chickens Paying Girl's College Expenses

UPLAND, Ind., Sept. 20.—(AP.)—A hundred and fifty chickens are working overtime to put Martha Smith through college.

The 19-year-old Hagerstown (Ind.) girl, a sophomore in the Taylor University music school here, brought the white leghorns from her father's flock and expects the eggs they lay to pay at least $350 of her expenses this year.

To speed up production—and she points to heavy receipts to prove the truth of her statement—she has harnessed an alarm clock so its turns on an electric light in the chicken house an hour or so before daybreak, sending the hens to their work early.

M'CREERY HEAD SEES UPTURN

The business tide had definitely turned and from now on an upturn in business can be expected, Arthur C. Kaufmann, vice president of McCreery's, declared at a dinner dance held last night by 1,000 store employes, celebrating the approaching twenty-eighth anniversary of the founding of the store.

Mr. Kaufmann declared that it doubtless would be some time before this improvement became evident in the Pittsburgh district. He said there was an optimistic feeling that stores that had rigidly maintained quality principles would feel the demand for better merchandise almost immediately. Albert K. Rowswell, humorist, also spoke.

Five new members were admitted to the McCreery 20-year honor roll club and were presented with $20 gold pieces. They are Harry C. Engel, Charles Kehrer, Miss Anna Frieland, Mrs. Mary Shook and Ernest Unruh. During the dinner a fashion revue and merchandise fair was held, at which new styles were shown.

CRAFTON RALLY FOR ROOSEVELT

Mrs. Carroll Miller, of Pittsburgh, a member of the National Democratic Speakers' Bureau, will address a Roosevelt League meeting in Crafton High School tonight. A musical program will be given by Miss Josephine McGrail, and Mrs. D. M. Breeding will preside. During the week, these members have been added to the Ladies' Committee of the Crafton district:

Mrs. E. E. Stewart, Mrs. Marguerite Conniff, Mrs. Thomas Meagher, Sr., Mrs. J. J. McGrail, Mrs. Charles E. Yost, Mrs. Catherine F. Holton, Mrs. L. A. Miller, Mrs. J. W. McAdoo, Mrs. John H. Schoeler, Mrs. Grace W. Wright, Mrs. Thomas J. Carroll, Mrs. William Coughey, Mrs. Stella Wiles, Miss Mary A. Kennedy. Thomas Meagher, Sr., is district chairman of the men's organization.

An automobile parade through Ingram, Crafton and Carnegie was staged last night by the committees.

ECONOMY GROUP FORMS HERE

Organization of a Western Pennsylvania committee of the National Economy League was announced here late yesterday. The league, a nation-wide organization, is opposed to all extravagances in government, particular stress being laid on the payment of a bonus to veterans not disabled in service.

Ralph W. Gibbs was named temporary chairman. Others of the committee are John Fraser, Arthur H. Scully, C. A. McClintock, George Hann, Earl C. B. Gould and E. B. Lee.

Admiral Richard E. Byrd is chairman of the national committee. The advisory council includes former President Calvin Coolidge, Alfred E. Smith, Elihu Root, Newton D. Baker, John J. Pershing and Admiral William S. Sims.

Legion Department Head to Speak Here

Paul H. Griffith, of Uniontown, will be the speaker at the October 5 meeting of the Homewood Post of the American Legion, it was announced today. Griffith was elected department commander of the Legion at the recent Pittsburgh convention. He will install new post officers and will talk on the Portland convention.

Ex-County Employe Found Dead in Home

Henry E. Vetter, 47, a former county employe, was found dead in the cellar of his home at 2325 Maple avenue, North Side, today, according to the morgue report. A rope attached from a rafter to his neck, he was found by a brother, George, the report said. Vetter had been ill and despondent, according to the report.

Things I Never Knew Till Now

(But which you knew all along)

That Edgar Allan Poe was kicked out of West Point for appearing at dress parade minus his trousers.

That the Ten Commandments are really fourteen.

That when Benedict (traitor) Arnold sold out to the British, his price was exactly $31,575.

That a year ago the average grocery account in New York City was $25 a week. Today it is $17.

That an oyster works 20 hours a day and loafs four.

That many of the greatest discoveries in medical science were made by doctors without beards, epoch-making finds having been announced by Pasteur, Stokes, Morgagni, Corrigan, et al., in their twenties.

That the Chinese Wall is the only structure made by human hands that would be visible to the astronomers on the moon.

That the average American telephone vocabulary consists of a total of 700 words. And 50 of them account for 60 per cent of the time spent on the wire.

That it's agin the law to deal in trading stamps.

That Atlanta, Ga., Richmond, Va., New York City and Montreal, Canada, are equally hot in July.

That "sarcasm" is derived from the Greek "sarkasmos," meaning "a biting of the flesh." (Somebody must've told him!)

That the Main street lamps in Saratoga go out at midnight to tell night loafers the time and then are lighted again till dawn.

That there is a fire department in a town on the 9-4 road to Atlantic City with lace curtains in its windows. Tee, hee.

That when birds twitter they are usually saying: "Don't muscle in! This is my territory!" (He reads the Encyc Britannica!)

That Don Marquis once posed as a tyro to discover methods of steamship card sharps—and wound up a heavy winner!

That Japan is the most restless part of the earth's crust—registering a slight volcanic disturbance four times daily.

That you cannot become a professional psychoanalyst until you've first been "psyched" yourself.

That there is no such thing as an undertow in a body of water. (The government marine authorities can prove it.)

The old cigar-store Indians, cast iron horses, ship figureheads and weather-vanes are now collected as rare Americana, and are considered "superb examples of folk-sculpture"!

That Bosco once sold the Brooklyn Bridge to a bootblack for $2,000 cash. The latter screamed until he got his money back.

That you cannot sue the United States government except by its own consent. (Oh, you knew that, too. Oh, sure!)

That you cannot be sure that the "turn has come" in the business cycle until six months after it's happened.

That the economic catastrophe of 1929-32 was predicted by theoreticians in Oxford University, and distant statesmen (like Trotsky, living in exile on an island in Turkey) while most of the big shots in Wall street banks were caught dozing. (In 1935 look out!!!!)

That an investment trust is often not a "trust" but a trading corporation, and not framed for investment but for speculation.

That if each of the two billion persons in the world were 6 ft. tall and six inches thick (Watson, the tape measure!) the whole human race could be packed into a box measuring half a mile in each direction.

That Hendrik Willem Van Loon, who figured all this out for his new geography book, was born 12 ft. under sea level—Rotterdam, Holland.

That Louis XVI lost his head (literally) because curiosity impelled him to look out of the carriage window while fleeing over the French border. He was recognized and returned to Paris and the guillotine.

That Julius Rosenwald said, "Business success is 95 per cent luck." (This made the newsreels because most people thought it was 96!)

That the Weather Bureau's predictions are usually right—in some years as often as 94 per cent of the time.

That all Western Christendom was saved from an invading Eastern horde at Vienna in 1683 by a general named John Sobieski.

That scientific tests prove conclusively that a man's character has absolutely nothing to do with his face.

That the odds are 1 to 13 million that any person will sign his name exactly the same way twice.

That an expert mathematician's testimony to that effect in a legal battle over a will signature made it possible for Hetty Green to become the world's richest woman. (Now do you like statistics?)

And that the women of America spent one billion smackers for beautification in 1931. (Some of them are entitled to a refund.)

Possibility that "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" might be among the early stock productions of the company shortly to become resident in the Pitt is quashed by a communication from the headquarters of Katharine Cornell in the Belasco Theater, New York. Miss Cornell is not releasing the Rudolf Besier play for immediate stock production because she intends eventually to take it on another extensive tour of the country. She played it from coast to coast last season and in her later tour which will be some time in the distance, she plans to present it even in one-night stands. Miss Cornell, now in Europe, expects to return to American next month to begin preparations for the opening of her new season early in December.

Harold Lloyd, en route from Hollywood to New York, whence he will sail with his family Saturday, October 1, will spend the winter at Cannes, France, where he has leased a house for the season. There is possibility of his making a picture abroad if he can find a suitable story.

"The Good Earth," dramatization of the Pearl S. Buck novel, had its premiere last night in Philadelphia as the opening gun of the season for the Theater Guild, which has arranged to transfer the production to New York on October 3. The cast includes Alla Nazimova, Earl Larrimore, Henry Travers and Sidney Greenstreet, all veterans, among the principals. Owen and Donald Davis made the dramatization, and it was directed by the Guild's ace, Philip Moeller.

"Forward March," another revue now in rehearsal in New York, is said to be scheduled for a Pittsburgh premiere in the Nixon prior to showing on Broadway. Beery, Marie Dressler to Co-Star

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1932, King Features Synd., Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 20. Take heart, all you fans who have been crying for Marie Dressler and Wallace Beery to do another picture like "Min and Bill." They're going to give you the same lineup in "Tugboat Annie," a drama of smiles and heart-tugs, now being prepared at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

The central character, "Tugboat Annie," was taken from life and written into a series of stories for a national magazine. Studio writers are weaving the various episodes into a single plot and Charles (Chuck) Reisner will bring them to the screen. Howard Hawks will supervise.

Marie Dressler

Shooting on the picture will not begin for a couple of months, because Wallie Beery has to make another film, "Flesh," and Marie has to have a rest following those added scenes for "Prosperity."

BOULEVARD TOPICS:

Jack Gilbert's contract was supposed to be up on the thirtieth, but he has given M. G. M. an extension of time for a proper vehicle. It's thumbs down, he says, for "The Devil Passes" . . . If Clara Bow was ever nervous about the talkies, it's all passed now. A crowd of 500 people watched her work on location, and her poise was undisturbed . . . Some time ago, Lew Cody's tailor sued him for three suits. Yesterday, Lew retaliated by advertising in a trade paper that he had refused to accept the suits . . . Unless M. G. M. finds a story for her, Colleen Moore wants to accompany husband Al Scott to New York next week . . . Thanks to the wanderlust of their dog, an Arabian saluki, Greta Nissen and Weldon Heyburn have paid out $200 in rewards. The pesky animal cost only $10 to start with . . . Just as soon as she can complete her picture, Lila Lee is heading for a month's vacation on Broadway . . . The C. B. De Mille Company is shooting all hours. Saw Ian Keith, sleepy-eyed, lunching at Al Levy's tavern after a 15-hour session.

Clara Bow

Benny Rubin is going back to New York to do three weeks personal appearances at $2,250 per. Ordinarily, an actor would be glad to pick up this important money, but Benny has a sick wife and baby in Hollywood and would like to remain here. When he comes back, however, there's a film role in store for him in Phil Goldstone's fight picture, "Comeback." Benny also owns 10 per cent of that current money-maker, "White Zombie."

SOMETHING INTERESTING

Another of those all-star pictures, "If I Had a Million," looks like an interesting item for the play-goers.

The story is about an eccentric millionaire who picks 10 names out of the phone book and gives each one $1,000,000.

Different writers and directors are being assigned to the various episodes. Norman McLeod is now directing some of the sequences with Richard Bennett and Allison Skipworth.

Cinema Keeps Jannings Film

The fine dramatic picture "Tempests"—in German "Stuerme der Leidenschaft," remains at the Avenue Cinema for another week. Emil Jannings is about three-fourths of this film, and Anna Sten is the other fourth. There is very fine acting to interpret the rather sordid story of an amiable criminal married to a flighty wife. Interesting character types and realistic backgrounds make this picture worth while.

BITS OF LIFE

All in a Day

BY MARK HELLINGER

King for a Day

IT'S THE prize story of the recent race meet at Saratoga Springs. Several people have already told me about it, so there must be more than a grain of truth in it. Thus:

Mr. Rogers, to give him a name that will not embarrass him, was driving back to his hotel from the races one afternoon. He leaned back in the cushioned seat of his Rolls Royce and smiled at the world. And he had good reason to smile.

He was contented. He was happy. He was a rich man. He had just won $6,000 at the races. The depression meant nothing to him. His business was doing well, his health was good and he still had many dollars in the bank. You, too, would undoubtedly have smiled if you had been in his shoes. Personally, I would have laughed out loud.

As the car bowled along, Mr. Rogers was suddenly seized by an impulse. He leaned forward and addressed his capable chauffeur.

"Smith," he cried, "I'm at peace with the world. I'm happy, Smith. Very, very happy."

Smith passed a red light quickly.

"That's fine, sir," was his reply. "I'm glad to hear it."

Mr. Rogers smiled to himself.

"Smith," he went on, "I feel in a generous mood. Maybe I shouldn't be talking this way to my chauffeur—and if my wife were here, she'd fire the both of us. But I'd like to do something for you. I'd like to make you as happy as I am. What'll it be?"

The chauffeur took a quick glance at his employer and passed another red light. No, the boss wasn't drunk. In a genial mood, that was all. Well, why not take advantage of it?

"If you're serious, sir," was his reply, "I can tell you in a word. I'd like to be just as you are, if only for a day. It's as simple as all that. And I hope I haven't offended you, sir."

"Smith," cried Rogers, "that's a good idea! We'll both have some fun." . . .

Rogers alighted at the Grand Union Hotel. He was still smiling. He ordered his chauffeur to put the car away and meet him in his suite in an hour.

The chauffeur donned his best suit—the other one—and appeared at the appointed time. His boss gripped his hand warmly.

"My boy," he said, "the whole thing is now clear in my mind. You and I are going to Montreal. We will leave tomorrow morning at 6, and the hotel will provide us with a chauffeur.

"You're going to ride in the back seat with me. Throughout the entire day, you're going to be king. I'll give you all the money you can possibly spend, and let your conscience be your guide.

"This is going to be swell, Smith. I've read about these things in books, but I never thought of trying it out. We'll both have the time of our lives, my boy."

Smith was grinning from ear to ear.

"Yes, sir," he replied. "Thank you, sir."

The wealthy man waved a hand.

"Don't mention it. But you can drop that 'sir' business tomorrow. Just call me Frank. That's all for now. Meet you at 6 a. m. tomorrow.

"Okay, Frank," said Smith. . .

At 6, the car was there. So was the new chauffeur. Mr. Rogers kept his word. He rode in the rear seat with Smith. Anxious to play the game to the limit, the boss discussed the market, the state of the weather, and the honesty of bookies with the man by his side.

Smith fairly radiated happiness. His eyes held a dazed look, but he had complete control of himself. Once he bawled the chauffeur out for passing a red light.

When they reached Montreal, Smith found that Rogers had already telegraphed their arrival.

As they walked into the lobby, two clerks and four bell boys bowed deeply and ran to assist the two guests. Rogers nudged Smith.

"My boy," he said quietly, "I forgot to tell you something. You are Smith, the cough drop king. I put that in my wire to this hotel."

For a moment, Smith felt like running. Then he composed himself. He assured the manager that the royal suite would do for his one-day stop, and that a few bottles of Burgundy well-iced would be welcome after the tedious trip.

Rogers waited until the manager disappeared. Then he took a bundle of bills out of a wallet. He placed them in Smith's hands.

"Here," he said, "is one thousand dollars. You may spend it as you see fit. I doubt that you will get rid of it all in one day, but, if you do, there's more to come. Just ask for it, understand?"

"Yes sir, Frank," said Smith.

Late that evening, they were in Texas Guinan's place. Smith was very properly plastered and Mr. Rogers wasn't far behind. Tex and her gang were cavorting all over the place when the lady who was stopped at the gates of Paris introduced Smith to the crowd.

"Folks," she bellowed, "I want you to meet a regular guy from the States. Mr. Smith, the cough drop king. Give him a big hand!"

Smith took a bow. Then he took another. On the third one, he almost fell into the soup. Then he plopped down and threw a careless arm around his boss.

"Y'know, Frank," he hiccough-ed. "You're swell guy. One swell guy. And I like ya, Frank. I honessy do. You're grand guy. Doon allis f'me."

Mr. Rogers beamed.

"That's all right, Smith," he said. "I told you I wanted to make you at peace with the world, just as I am. If this accomplishes that purpose, then I'm satisfied. Are you happy?"

Smith grinned.

"I'm so happy, Frank, I could cry. Honess. I mean it. This is t'grandess day of my life. You been swell, Frankie, old boy, old boy, old boy. You been mighty decent. 'N' I ain't gonna f'get it, neither. No sir!"

Rogers asked Smith what was next on the program. Smith said he felt tired, but he didn't want to end his dream too quickly. Rogers agreed that it should be prolonged as much as possible, and suggested that they stop at a combination roadhouse nearby, where he had some business to transact with the manager.

And that's just what they did. They walked into the place, and found some very charming people there. On one side were roulette tables. On the other side a crowd was playing faro. Some were shooting craps. All were having a grand time.

Rogers introduced Smith to the assistant manager, and told him to see that Smith had a good time.

"Introduce him to some girls," Rogers said. "Let him enjoy himself. He's a friend of mine."

The croupier bowed. Rogers walked into the manager's office. Smith stayed out, and met some girls. He drank more and talked more. One hour later, Rogers emerged. He asked the assistant manager where his friend was.

"Mr. Smith said he was very tired, sir," was the reply. "He amused himself for awhile at the tables, and then went back to the hotel. He said you'd take care of this matter for him. He lost $40,000 at roulette!" . . .

Producer Seeks for Baby Garbo

Producer Jack Hays' call for a 4-year-old Greta Garbo has been answered by every mother in Hollywood who has observed a far-away look in her blessed darling's eye. The specifications for the miniature Garbo, desired for one of the new Educational-Baby Burlesk Comedies, is that the little chunk of glamour be not more than 36 inches tall, not over 4 years of age; she must enunciate clearly in speaking lines, and of course, she must resemble Garbo.

Cooper's Chimpanzee Sent Gifts

Gifts for Toluca, Gary Cooper's pet chimpanzee which the Paramount star brought back from his African trip, are arriving daily from all parts of the world.

While Cooper works in "A Farewell to Arms" with Helen Hayes, the presents from fans pile up in his dressing room. Among the gifts are a knitted suit, hat, bracelets, necklaces, cake, peanuts, miniature lady's pumps, dishes and love letters.

Carrillo to Sing in Next Picture

Leo Carillo will sing a special number in "Second Fiddle," according to J. I. Schnitzer, who is producing this RKO Radio Picture. Carillo's number is "Dream a Song," with music by Frank Harling and lyrics by Jack Brennan. "No, No, Monsieur," another number, will be sung by Vivienne Osborne, former Follies star. Harling wrote the music and Leo Robbins contributed the lyrics.

Gate Crasher Gets Role in Films

Tammany Young, who was termed "The Nation's Guest" by no less an authority than Damon Runyon because of his uncanny ability to gain admittance to any event of national importance without a ticket, not only managed to "crash the gate" at the Paramount studios to appear in a scene of "Madison Square Garden," but actually got paid for doing it.

Beauties to Compete

Several hundred beauties of Hollywood and neighboring villages are getting out their best powder and lipstick—there's work to be done!

J. G. Bachman, independent producer who is to make "Goldie" for Radio Pictures' release, is anxious to secure about 70 pulchritudinous creatures for the beauty contest scenes in the yarn of a modern gold-digger.

There are nearly 10 times the number needed of actual beauty contest winners in the film city at this very moment—and all of them think they should be chosen.

PIRATES REPEAT FLAG TRIP OF 1908

GOING TO CHICAGO to fight for a pennant was no new experience for George Gibson. Almost a quarter of a century ago, the present manager of the Pittsburgh club was the star catcher of the Pirates when they invaded the Windy City for their final game of the season, with the National League flag at stake on the result. That was in the memorable three-cornered race of 1908, when the Buccaneers, Cubs and Giants came down the stretch in almost a triple deadlock. With the Merkle game thrown out, only one game separated the first and third clubs. The Pirates led with .641, the Cubs were second with .638, and the Giants were third with .633.

George Gibson

If the Bucs had won that final game, played on Sunday, October 4, they would have clinched the pennant, and the play-off of the Merkle game would not have been necessary to decide the championship. But they didn't win it. While the Bruins were nicking Vic Willis and Howard Camnitz for 12 hits, Three-Fingered Brown was holding the Rovers to seven, and Chicago took the decision, 5 to 2, before 30,247 paying customers, the largest crowd that ever witnessed a baseball game up to that time. The defeat eliminated the Pirates, but as the Giants still had a chance to win at the finish if the Merkle tie game were replayed, the league board of directors ordered that contest played over, with the result that the Cubs grabbed both the game and the pennant, their final percentage being .643, while the Pirates and Giants were tied for second place with .636.

BOTH MAJOR LEAGUE batting championships may be won by cast-offs. Lefty O'Doul, a sure winner in the National, was kicked all around the baseball map for years. Before landing in Brooklyn he was chucked aside by as many as five big league clubs—the Yankees, Red Sox, Cubs, Giants and Phillies.

Another discard will mount the throne in the American League if Dale Alexander beats out Jimmy Foxx for the crown. After carrying him three and a half seasons, Detroit dropped Alexander on June 13, this year, when it traded him, with Roy Johnson, to the Red Sox for Earl Webb.

ALEXANDER'S PLAYING HAS shown a vast improvement since he joined the Red Sox. Though he batted well above .300 in his three full seasons with Detroit, it was held there that he was lacking in hustling qualities.

In Boston the big first baseman has displayed new life and picked up in all departments. Whether the change was due to smart handling by Marty McManus, or Alexander is a player of the type that stands out only on a tail-end team where there is less of a strain, is a question on which Boston and Detroit fans take opposite views.

THOUGH MOST OF the American League parks are said to have been built for left-hand hitters, this will be the fourth straight year in which a righthand swinger has led that league in batting, whether Foxx or Alexander takes the honors. Lew Fonseca topped the list in 1929, and Al Simmons was the leader in 1930 and 1931. The success of O'Doul marks a return of left-hand supremacy in the National, giving southside swingers four titles in six years.

IN ENUMERATING THE advantages which they expect the Yankees to have over the Cubs if the latter win the right to play in the world series, American League critics are stressing the point that Joe McCarthy knows more about the Bruins than Charley Grimm knows about the Yanks.

Charles O'Leary

But they are overlooking a bet if they think the Chicago pitchers are without a little black book on the New York batters. Charley O'Leary, Cub coach, spent several years with the Yankees, and what that veteran doesn't store away in his wise old dome about the strong and weak points of clubs and individuals on the ball field isn't worth knowing.

IN THE SAME connection, Grimm hints that perhaps the Cubs do not have the same style of play now as when McCarthy was their manager. And he admits having picked up a few items about the Yanks from Pirate and Cardinal players who have met them.

Grimm does not deny that he expects the Yanks' left-hand hitters to be bothered in the Chicago games if the weather is warm and the left-center bleacherites shed their coats. But he doesn't look for the home fans to make themselves uncomfortable out of loyalty. "We have cold weather in Chicago even in the early days of October," he said.

TIME'S SWEEPING CHANGES never were brought to attention more forcibly than in recent news dispatches telling of the playing of the Western Kansas tennis championships in—guess where. No place else but Dodge City. Tennis in Dodge City! It's enough to stagger the imagination of old-timers who recall that spot as the toughest town in the country, the haunt of the hard-boiled, where the guns of killers blazed—the end of the battle trails, with its Boot Hill, burial place for desperadoes and their victims. Where once rang the shots of pistols, now ring the shouts of "Vantage" and "Forty-Love."

THE TRAINING ACTIVITIES of Mickey Walker at Summit in preparation for his fight with Max Schmeling next Monday have attracted the notice of Eastern boxing critics to a young heavyweight in whom they see signs of coming greatness. He is Arthur Huttick, one of Walker's sparring partners.

Huttick has been boxing professionally less than two years. In his last five starts he has beaten Eddie Benson, Bob Olin, Natie Brown, Jack McCarthy and Unknown Winston. The last named recently flattened Walter Cobb. Little attention was paid to Huttick previously, but he has been mauling Walker around in a way to make expert appraisers of fistic talent hail him as a future big shot.

HUTTICK WOULDN'T BE the first to rise to the Queensberry heights from the obscure role of a sparmate. No one saw the makings of a champion in Jim Jeffries when he was working in Jim Corbett's camp, but Jeff came on to beat every heavyweight in sight, including the great Corbett himself twice.

Bob Zuppke

Another was Kid McCoy. He was a punch absorber for Tommy Ryan, and gained so much fistic knowledge while working in that capacity that later he took the welterweight championship from the man he had served as a training aide.

THE LAST TWO seasons were lean ones for Coach Bob Zuppke in football at the University of Illinois. His teams won only six games while losing 11 times. But even with these figures included to cut down his all-time winning average, Zuppke's record of 19 years of coaching at Illinois continues to be a standout. Under the veteran mentor, the Illini have engaged in 98 Western Conference games, of which they won 57, lost 34 and tied 7. In 45 contests outside the Big Ten, they registered 38 victories against only 6 defeats and 1 tie. All told, in and out of the Conference, Zuppke's machines have taken part in a total of 143 games for a grand record of 95 triumphs, 40 losses and 8 draws. Up to 1930 they won 59 battles while losing only 29.

MOUNTAINEERS MAY USE NEW ATTACK HERE

By JESS CARVER

Messrs Joe Bach and Elmer Layden, or, as it should be, seeing as how Elmer is the head coach, Layden and Bach, the football mentors at Duquesne, are leafing through their notes of last year and the year before on West Virginia as they prepare the Dukes for their major tussle with the Mountaineers at Forbes Field Friday night.

Greasy Neale, the Mountaineers' mentor, sort of has the Dukes guessing this year. They haven't had an opportunity to scout him, and the reports are out that Neale has changed his offense and will pop the Dukes with more than one surprise Friday night. Coach Neale never was noted for his ability to build an offense. He's always been able to turn out strong defense teams and his elevens always are game. Last year, his first on the job, he did not attempt to show much, but spent his time building for this year.

SCRIMMAGE TODAY

Be all that as it may, the Dukes are going to hold their final scrimmage in preparation for the game this afternoon, sending the first and second elevens against the freshmen, with the latter equipped with what Mountaineer plays Layden and Bach figure will be used.

The same lineup that started against Westminster in last week's inaugural tussle will be sent against the Mountaineers. Better off for reserves, especially on the line, the Dukes are anticipating their first victory in history over West Virginia. West Virginia is depending a great deal on sophomore talent, and sophomore lineups against the Notre Dame system, especially when it is worked as well as it is by the Dukes, are dangerous. The Dukes will be just as fast as the Mountaineers, probably a couple steps faster, and the Red and Blue machine will be much more experienced. About the only edge the visitors figure to enjoy will be an advantage in weight, but it will be very slight.

TALK OVER RULES

It looked like old home week at the Keystone Club last night as college, prep and high school football coaches from all parts of the tristate sector joined with the Pittsburgh chapter of the Eastern Association for the Selection of Football Coaches in a rules interpretation confab. The gathering was presided over by Walter E. Okeson, of Lehigh, commissioner of the association.

Commissioner Okeson went into some detail in explaining the accepted rulings agreed on by the football rules committee as concern the new edicts written into the gridiron code since last year, but to tell the truth, the suspicion lurked in more than one mind that the good Commissioner was a bit vague himself on several points. How could he help but be? It is a sure thing that no official in the country is absolutely clear on all points. Okeson practically admitted as much when he ask the local of-

PANTHER ENDS SHOW CLASS

WINDBER, Pa., Sept. 20.—Camp Hamilton, literally is swarming with ends all of a sudden and not only is Jock Sutherland busy figuring out just how he is going to make use of them all, but the varsity men, Ted Dailey and Muggsy Skladany, are digging in deeper in desperate attempts to hold their posts with the first string.

Yesterday, Harvey Rooker, who has succeeded Franklin Hood as the fireman at the Pitt camp, gave the first and second team interferers all kinds of trouble as he consistently fought them off and nailed the ball carriers.

END OUTLOOK BETTER

The rangy youth from Tarentum, who likes to dress up in a fireman's suit during the summer, opened his drive last Friday, and has continued to show real ability each day. Sutherland now has five ends with better than average possibilities in Skladany, Dailey, Wojcihovsk, Timmons and Rooker.

Yesterday's scrimmage was short but intense. The varsity and second teams both had 10 or 15 minutes' work trying to break through the third string line, with the varsity outgaining the second team.

Mike Nicksick, Burgettstown youth, scored twice for the varsity, and Mike Sebastian gathered in a pass from Miller Mungas to get loose for the second outfit.

FINAL SCRIMMAGE TODAY

Today will see the Panthers in the last scrimmage of the week, possibly of the season. The varsity and second teams, or rather, the Blues and Golds, will be pitted against each other in a regulation game, with the varsity attempting to even things up for defeat administered Saturday.

John Luch and Rocco Cutri, indisposed fullback and quarterback, respectively, returned to practice yesterday, but Luch was not allowed to do any rough work. Cutri, on the other hand, did a nice job of backing up the third string line.

President Haddock, John T. Taylor, Henry Blum, Pat Carr, J. J. Shannon and J. Rogers Flannery were elected as delegates to the national convention, and Arthur C. Couch, Frank Shaughnessy, Charles G. Lane, Jr., W. C. McCafferty and Jack Kennard named as alternates. John Taylor was reappointed official handicapper.

In her report on women's swimming activities, Miss Frances Taylor paid tribute to Lenore Kight and Anna Mae Gorman, of the Carnegie Library Club, of Homestead, members of the U. S. women's Oylmpic swimming team.

Hockey Showdown In Prospect Today

A hockey showdown is expected this afternoon when Attorney James F. Callahan, representing the local National League club, confers with officials of the Philadelphia Company, owner of Duquesne Garden, regarding a lease on the Craig street arena.

Unable to reach a terms agreement at several previous conferences, it is expected that negotiations will be called off at the parley today.

LOCAL SANDLOT NINE WINS

DAYTON, O., Sept. 20.—The Whitaker team, of Pittsburgh, advanced to the third round of the National Baseball Federation's annual championship baseball tournament here yesterday, defeating Cincinnati, 3 to 0, behind the brilliant pitching of Eddie Anderson.

Anderson kept nine Cincinnati hits well scattered, while his mates bunched their five to score three runs, scoring once in the second inning and twice in the third.

In other second-round games yesterday, Dayton defeated New Haven, 10 to 6; Flint eliminated Indianapolis, 15 to 3; Detroit toppled Dearborn, 9 to 2, and Newcomerstown eliminated Pontiac, 7 to 5. Cleveland, defending champion, beaten in the first round, managed to remain in the tourney by beating Akron, 9 to 3.

TECH ELEVENS CLASH TODAY

The second intra-camp game was scheduled for Carnegie Tech's hard-working gridders this afternoon, and some more changes are expected in the varsity lineup: Coaches Waddell and Steffen proved that they were not talking for effect when they announced every position of the firs team wide open.

After last Friday's strenuous scrimmage, several boys were immediately moved up to the first string, and they will stay there until they are pushed out by their mates. Johnny Sayles, who was the offensive star of last Friday's battle, is now definitely ensconsed in a varsity halfback job, and the burden of proof rests upon Bill Spisak. Bill Carlson and the other boys who were showing the way before the Wheeling boy had his big afternoon.

The other backs are co-Capt. Kavel, Joe Mihm and Angelo Bevevino, and if they click in today's battle, they are almost certain to be the starters against Geneva on October 1.

Lee Nutter, who was a substitute Plebe tackle last year, also jumped up to the first team on the basis of his showing Friday, and he was to take the field as a regular this afternoon.

Brown Stops Pladner, Willie Davies Loses

TORONTO, Ontario, Sept. 20.—(AP.)—Two good right hand punches were all Panama Al Brown found it necessary to use to ognized bantamweight champion Pladner for Brown's generally recognized bantanweight championship.

The 6-foot Negro knocked out Pladner in 2 minutes 21 seconds of the first round of their scheduled 15-round title bout here last night, flooring the Frenchman for a count of six with one right hand punch and knocking him down and out with another.

Bobby Leitham, of Montreal, Canadian bantamweight champion, received an unpopular decision over Willie Davies, of Charleroi, Pa., in the 10-round semi-final.

PIRATES MEET CHICAGO IN DUAL BILL

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—Nothing save a wet break in the weather can prevent a wild scene at Wrigley Field this afternoon when the flashy Cubs and scrappy Pirates are slated to mix in a doubleheader. The fact that Charley Grimm's club can clinch the National League pennant with one victory over the Buccos lends enchantment to the general scene.

Upward of 40,000 Steve Swetonic fans are expected to see the dual scrap.

The ambitious Pirates came over from Pittsburgh last night. George Gibson's crew was well aware of the trying situation, but they were chesty enough to think they can take four games in a row from the Bruins and thus make the pennant fight a thing of remarkable tenseness.

The Pirates must not lose a game of the four carded here, if they are to remain a contender. The Rovers move to St. Louis for four fights with the Redbirds, but four triumphs over the Cards would avail them nothing as regards first place, if they drop a single battle in Chicago.

SWETONIC MAY HURL

Manager Gibson states he will use Steve Swetonic in the opening clash with the Cubs this afternoon in the event that Steve's arm is sufficiently strong. The right-hander who stood out as one of the game's best pitchers in the first half of the season fell a victim to arm trouble, but of late he has improved.

Opposed to Swetonic will be Guy Bush, who has been a high spot in the Chicago drive since Grimm took over the reins of leadership. Either Bill Harris or Bill Swift and Bud Tinning will twirl in the second game.

The Pirates, by the way, are closer than ever to second money as a result of the Dodgers' defeat yesterday at the hands of the troublesome Phillies. The Buccos have a lead of five full games on Max Carey's team. The Quakers threaten to dislodge the Brooklyns today, they being but one-half a game below the Flatbush crew. The Dodgers have only two games to play.

CUBS PLAN REST

Should the Cubs win one game today, Grimm plans to give some of the regulars, including himself, a rest from the second game of the doubleheader on until the World Series. Marvin Gudat was slated to go to first base for Grimm, Lance Richbourg, recently recalled from the International League, was down for left field in place of Riggs Stephenson, with Frank Demaree in Kiki Cuyler's place in right. Woody English's place was to go to Stanley Hack, with Zack Taylor doing the catching in place of Hemsley.

Should the Pirates defer the Cub triumph by winning the first game, all hands were to go right back to work behind Tinning, to try to finish the championship winning in the second game.

Grimm's World Series plans, as far as he has made any, include using Bush, Warneke, Malone and Root as his starting pitchers.

Nick Altrock Baseball's Humorist Says:

BOSTON, Sept. 20.—No wonder the Cubs have got a little careless lately. They've practically got the pennant clinched and with 75,000 World Series crowds in New York and 52,000 mobs in Chicago, the boys can't keep their minds off pecks of pearls and gallons of diamonds.

Nick Altrock

I understand one of the players intends to use rubies for his Thanksgiving cranberry sauce and a couple more are looking up the price of radium necktie pins.

A gate like this year's series would even make Kuhn Loeb's mouth water and I wouldn't trade the 1932 Cubs for all of Insull's middle west utilities. Yes, folks, baseball is now Big Business with two capital B's. Back when we were buying Liberty Bonds in the World War, who ever thought the American public would subscribe more than a million dollars to finance just a world series. Quick, Watson, my snuffbox of heroin!

CHANGES ONLY EMPHASIZE OLD GRID RULES—WARNER

GAME LITTLE DIFFERENT, POP SAYS

By GLENN S. (POP) WARNER
Member All America Board of Football.
(Reg. U. S. Patent Office.)

Football fans are wondering what effect the changes in the rules will have upon the game this fall. They seem to be worried for fear the rule makers are gradually trying to make football too much of a molly-coddle sport. My prediction is that spectators will notice little difference in the game this season from what it was last year.

Pop Warner

I am saying this because in spring practice under the new rules no one but an expert could notice any difference and because in the exhibition football game between the East and the Far West, which was played in the Stadium as one of the features of the Olympic games, there appeared to be no noticeable change, even to the many coaches present. Football still retains its thrilling and virulent body contact features, and it will be just as interesting and exciting as it ever was.

As a matter of fact, practically all the changes made were to emphasize rules already in the book, but coming under the head of unnecessary roughness. Football officials allowed entirely too much kneeing and piling up, and they allowed players to use their hands in an unnecessarily rough manner. The rules committee simply changed the rules so that it becomes mandatory for the officials to penalize such unnecessary roughness by more definitely worded rules.

USE HANDS IN DEFENSE

For instance, it is lawful to use the hands on the defense. That has been a basic rule ever since the game has been played. There was a rule against unnecessary roughness and it had become perfectly evident that some teams used their hands, not so much to push their opponents aside and get at the ball carrier, but to deal punishment to their opponents. It was us to the officials to determine at what point the hands ceased to be used legitimately and became instruments of torture.

The officials did not like to differentiate and therefore allowed too much latitude in the use of the hands. The rules committee now differentiates for the officials and says there shall be no striking with the hands. Defensive players still can use their hands legitimately as they always could to push their opponents out of the way.

The new dead ball rule making the ball dead when ahy part of the ball carrier's body excepting his hands or feet touch the ground was made so as to prevent kneeing and piling up. These things always have been against the rules, but officials were loath to penalize them.

PROTECTS BALL CARRIER

The rule will work a hardship upon a ball carrier who slips and partly goes down without being in the grasp of an opponent, even though he might regain his feet and continue his forward progress before being tackled. However, the new rule protects him and will also prevent flukes caused by fumbles when the ball carrier hits the ground and at the same time loses the ball. Under the old rules, when a ball carrier so fumbled it became a question as to whether the fumble occurred before or after the referee blew his whistle. Now, since the ball is automatically dead when the player hits the ground, a fumbled ball caused by such fall is not a fumble, whether the referee blows his whistle or not.

The rule forcing five men of the receiving team to stand within 15 yards of the kickoff line on kickoffs will have very little effect on methods of forming interference in running the ball back. Having 15 yards' start on their opponents, these five men have ample time to run back and form compact wedges with the other players, the same as they have always done, and I believe the committee will find that the new rule will not remedy what they considered one of the rough features of the game. Certainly it will not prevent plenty of interference for the runner on these kickoff returns.

NO CHANGE IN BLOCKING

There will be no change in methods of tackling and blocking in spite of the rule against players leaving their feet in the performing of these basic fundamentals.

Again I say football will be just the same virile game as heretofore, with a little less unnecessary roughness.

GREAT ELEVEN ASSURED AT NOTRE DAME

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Sept. 20.—Notre Dame, where one all-America football player succeeds another, is getting ready to go after the national championship it lost a year ago.

Take it from Hunk Anderson, who is beginning his second full season as head coach, the "fighting Irish" will be a strong team this fall, fully capable of upholding their reputation.

One hundred and ten huskies are trying to make Anderson forget all about Marchy Schwartz, Tommy Yarr and Nordy Hoffman, sparkplugs of Notre Dame elevens for the last three years.

And it happens that Schwartz's understudy, Mike Koken, is ready to plug up the vacancy at left half, while five monogram men—Jim Harris, Norm Greeney, Bill Pierce, Joe Pivarnik and Harry Wunsch—are striving for Hoffman's spot at right guard. Hoffman was all-America last season.

GORMAN AT CENTER

Anderson cannot be so optimistic, however, when he looks at the center position where Yarr was a mountain of strength. Filling that post is about the greatest task faced by Anderson, but he thinks he has the right man in Tom (Kitty) Gorman, former all-Illinois and all-Chicago star with St. Phillip's. Ben Alexander, another letterman, probably will understudy Gorman.

Schwartz, Yarr and Hoffman are back at Notre Dame as assistant coaches, trying to impart some of their football wisdom to the men filling their shoes.

All of last year's quarterbacks, Charles Jaskwhich, Emmett Murphy, Laurie Vejar and Joe Foley, are back to bark signals. Carl Cronin is the only right half lost, for Joe Sheeketski. Ray Breancheau and Curtis (Duke) Millheam, the southpaw passer, are hustling for places again.

MANY GOOD FULLBACKS

George Malinkovich, Steve Banas and Jimmy Leonard, monogram winners in 1931, comprise the fullback material. The head coach is not worrying there.

Capt. Paul Host will switch over to right end, with Ed Kosky, who for two seasons has been about as good as Host, taking over left end.

Joe Kurth, all-America right tackle last fall, is back, along with Ed Krause, all-western left tackle. Anderson's only worries are for a couple of dependable reserves.

From Harris, Greeney, Pierce, Pivarnik and Wunsch, all seasoned, will come the regular guards.

CLAIRTON SET FOR OPENER

By JULIUS LEVIN

The Clairton High School football team, winner of the Class A championship last season and which will compete for the Class AA Conference laurels this fall, ushers in its football campaign Saturday afternoon with Central Catholic High, of Pittsburgh, as its attraction in the Clairton Stadium.

Its 1931 varsity eleven riddled by graduations, Clairton will present practically a rebuilt lineup in the inaugural battle. Coaches George Woodman and Bill Wyke had a real job on their hands making replacements in their regular lineup. While Central Catholic High, coached by Bill Donohue, former Edgewood High and Carnegie Tech star, is regarded as a warmup opponent, the Clairton mentors have warned their charges not to take the game too lightly.

Clairton will not be the only AA contender to see action this weekend. Friday night Charleroi faces a real test in Scott High, while at New Castle, Phil Bridenbaugh's eleven will engage Miles Bryan High, of McKees Rocks. Both games are night affairs.

Saturday duels involving AA elevens find Monessen at Duquesne, Westinghouse at Wilkinsburg, Glassport at McKeesport, Allegheny at Greensburg, Aliquippa at Washington, Trafford at Turtle Creek Union and Scottdale at Jeannette.

JOCKEYS SUSPENDED

BALTIMORE, Sept. 20.—The Maryland Racing Commission has announced the suspension of three jockeys for infraction of the racing rules. Pat Remillard was suspended for two weeks, while Charles Jackson, Negro, was banned for a year. The two engaged in a fist fight. Eddie Smallwood was banned indefinitely for fouling.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—James Manning, aged 22 years, today was charged with having sponged the race horse Panetian at Saratoga on August 22. The act was discovered before the race and the horse was scratched.

GAR WOOD SETS NEW RECORD

ALGOMAC, Mich., Sept. 20.—(AP.)—Gar Wood set the world's one-mile hydroplane record at 124.91 statute miles an hour with his Miss America X here today. The former record was 119.75, held by Kaye Don with Miss England III, and established on Loch Lomond, Scotland, July 18.

The time was the average of two dashes over the measured mile, one upstream and one down. Immediately after completing them, Wood swung the big 48-cylinder speed creation about and again roared up the course. His second run upstream, however, was slower than the first, 122.17 miles and hour.

Wood slowed down on the second trip downstream and no time was clocked. He said he was satisfied with the mark Miss America X had made and that no further attempt would be made at present to set it higher.

U. S. Women Lead In Canadian Golf

MONTREAL, Quebec, Sept. 20.—(AP.)—Mrs. Alex Gold, of England, medalist, defeated Mrs. Harvey Martin, Montreal, 5 and 4, today in the opening round of match play in the Canadian women's golf championship.

Bernice Wall, of Oshkosh, Wis., was 2 up on Nora Hankin, young Montreal star, at the ninth hole, and Fritzi Stifel, of Wheeling, W. Va., had a five-hole lead over Mrs. Adair Gibson, of Toronto, at the turn. Bea Gottlieb, Great Neck, L. I., was 2 up on Mrs. N. K. Gordon, of Montreal, at the ninth.

BUSH MAY LEAD REDS

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—Donie Bush, former manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates and Chicago White Sox, who piloted Minneapolis to the 1932 pennant in the American Association, may be appointed leader of the Cincinnati Reds for 1933, it was reported here.

PETERSVILLE WINS

BUTLER, Pa., Sept. 20.—Petersville defeated Parker, 2 to 0, in the sixth game of the championship series for the Butler County Baseball League title here yesterday.

World Series Rivals No. 2—Catchers

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Judging from his one-punch knockout scored over Carl Reynolds, Senator outfielder, Catcher Bill Dickey, of the Yankee champions, might give the coming world series games a flavor similar to the spice dished up in the 1925 titular set by one Earl Smith, the justly celebrated goat-getter of the Pirates of that vintage.

Bill Dickey

Gabby Hartnett

Assuming the Cubs are to be the new champs of the National League, the impending conflict of the two leagues will bring together a couple of notables who are of a distinctive masculine gender. Charles Leo (Gabby) Hartnett, the Chicago scrapper and broadcaster, is not a mere Cub, but a grizzly bear when he is riled, and apparently William Dickey is no blushing violet.

A talkative receiver often will throw a good hitter off his stride. Smith surely did prove this contention while the Buccaneers of seven years ago were trimming the Washingtonians to bring the big title back to the National League. Manager Bucky Harris, of the Senators, was an especial victim of Smith's darts. Oil of the Ozarks caused the fiery Harris to go into a rage when he should nave possessed a cool head with which to direct his club. And Goose Goslin, often a feared slugger, listened to the Smith chatter to the extent that he forgot his main mission in the fray.

SMITH GOES LIMIT

It is not likely that either Dickey or Hartnett will go as far as the colorful Smith to win, but, being positive characters, Bill and Gabby are apt to make the welkin ring around the home plate. Both are big fellows blessed with much natural ability, and the fact that each has a heavy appeal adds to their value.

Dickey is about seven years younger than Hartnett, but Gabby is not the type that grows old. Neither is fast on his feet, so that the speed element does not enter into their estimates. American League experts state that Dickey has usurped Mickey Cochrane's crown as the best catcher in the American League; if he really has done this, it would be in order for National League supporters to admit that the Yankees will have at least a small bulge in the catching department when the Cubs meet the rival circuit champs.

HOME RUN HITTERS

Hartnett is having an off season at the plate. Leo is batting no better than .265 for the year, while his foe is courting the .300 mark. The Cub ace, nevertheless, belongs in that class of batters known as home run hitters. Like Dickey, Gabby is liable to break up any game by hitting the rocket out of the park. Dickey has whacked out 15 homers this season as against 10 for Hartnett, and Bill probably would have had a higher total were it not for the month's suspension which followed his assault upon Reynolds. Dickey, however, is a left-handed batter and the right field bleachers of Yankee Stadium offer a premium for the southpaw hitters. If Bill can hit a ball harder and farther than Gabby he surely is a slugger of the first order. Evidently he is a more consistent batsman than his Chicago rival.

Hartnett's spirit is hard to match, yet Dickey is said to be a prototype of the Cub receiver. Until he hurt his arm, Leo was regarded as one of the best throwers among the catchers of the game, and apparently the old strength is back in the mighty arm. Dickey also is proficient in his throws, so that all base runners must beware the catchers.

YANKS CONCEDED EDGE

In the matter of second-string receiving, the Cubs appear to be in better shape than the Yankees. Rolly Hemsley, former Pirate, is a star in his own right, when he behaves, and apparently Rolly is doing well for Charley Grimm. Zach Taylor also is a dependable catcher. Arndt Jorgens is the soft-pedal catcher for the McCarthy entry. The fact that Marse Joe, when Dickey was out, pulled in Eddie Phillips, Newark star and last year a Bucco, would indicate that Jorgens is not a finished maskman.

Summing up the situation, it seems fair to give Dickey the edge, but the advantage is hardly enough to change the result of the series.

GROVE, GREEN KNOCKOUT WINNERS

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor

The weekly thrill was served up for the boxing fans at Hickey Park last night as the Millvale club closed its outdoor season before a small crowd. It was in the form of a knockout in which the victim was sent completely out of the ring and was counted out as his seconds rushed to his assistance, automatically disqualifying him even if he hadn't been counted out of time.

It happened in the main event of the card of four eight-rounders. Davy Grove, of the North Side, was the winner, and Jacquette Elverillo, Negro welterweight, formerly of Porto Rico, the loser. Grove won all of the way, dropping his man for a count of nine with a right to the jaw in the first round and hammering his body with hooks thereafter until he weakened Jacquette for the final blow.

Elverillo landed over the lower rope near his own corner and rolled over the platform edge onto the ground. He never returned, being taken from the spot to the dressing room after the toll of 10.

DISANTIS, RUDY WIN

Louis DiSantis, of Cleveland, beat Don Asto, of Uniontown, all of the way in the semi-final, put on after the main bout, despite the fact that he injured his right thumb in the third round; Young Rudy, of Charlerol, outfought Paul Oger, of Fairmont, W. Va., in a slugfest to win the referee's decision, and Anson Green, Negro middleweight, of Homestead, won by a technical knockout over Larry Madge, of Cleveland, when the opening bout was stopped after the fourth round to save Madge from further punishment. The Clevelander had a bad cut on his mouth and had been down for counts of nine and six in the third round, and nine in the fourth.

BALD, MADDEN TRIUMPH IN FIRST TILTS

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Second and third round competition will occupy attention of surviving contestants in the tenth annual Harvard Cup interscholastic tennis tourney on the University of Pittsburgh rectangles this afternoon. It is the aim of Chairman Wells Fay to reduce the field to the quarter-final quota of eight before nightfall and thus to permit wind-up hostilities on Friday.

Yesterday's milling reduced an original array of 40 aspirants to precisely half, that number, 16 tussles being actually battled out and two going by default.

BALD BEATS KETTERER

Ralph Bald, West Penn and Pittsburgh Center junior champion, out-steadied Walter Ketterer, Dormont hope, 6-1, 6-4, to indicate justification of his selection as first performer in the chosen group, while his Mount Lebanon mate, Henry Ackerman, 1930 winner of the Crimson flagon and third seeded warrior, thumped Howard Elson, Clairton entrant, 6-3, 6-0.

Bob Madden, driving Schenleyite, West Penn and Pittsburgh Center boys' premier, flashed form to outstroke Jack Schroeder, Sewickley luminary, 6-1, 6-2. Bob Burnett, clever Wilkinsburger and fourth on the roster, displayed a neat all-around game to dispose of Alf Pollock, Arnold school star, 6-1, 6-1.

Ray McColligan, Duke prep southpaw ace, who encounters Bald in today's feature fray, offered consistently sound exhibition in accounting for Jim Chatham, Perry contender, 6-1, 6-2.

MILLER DOWNS DILLON

Several debates went the limit. Perhaps the keenest of these saw Billy Miller, Taylor Allderdice High's bet to retain the bowl on Squirrel Hill, nose out Byron Dillon, of Bellevue, 4-6, 6-3, 7-5.

The summary:

First round—Thomas Stout, Cornopolis, defeated Theodore Lesko, Munhall, 6-0, 6-0; James Criswell, South Hills, defeated Robert Mercer, Clairton, 6-2, 6-0; James Atensberg, Shady Side Academy, defeated John Garvey, Munhall, 6-0, 6-1; Kenneth Bitenour, South Hills, defeated James Montgomery, University School, 6-4, 6-4; Floyd Schake, Turtle Creek, defeated Robert Johnson, Bellevue, 6-1, 6-4; Bernard Greenberg, Taylor Allderdice, won from James Holt, Schenley, by default; Robert Merchant, Wilkinsburg, won from James Lane, Rankin, by default; Samuel K. Pollock, Arnold School, defeated Robert Wandrey, Duquesne, 7-5, 3-6, 9-7.

Second round—Ralph Bald, Mt. Lebanon, defeated Walter Ketterer, Dormont, 6-1, 6-4; Raymond A. McColligan, Duquesne University Prep, defeated James Chatham, Perry, 6-1, 6-2; Allerton Miller, Shady Side Academy, defeated Dudley Weiss, Crafton, 6-2, 6-4; William Drew, Dermont, defeated Curtis Stone, Perry, 6-4, 4-6, 6-2; John D. Jones, Crafton, defeated James Hazen, Cornopolis, 8-6, 6-1; Henry Ackerman, Mt. Lebanon, defeated Howard Elson, Clairton, 6-3, 6-0; Robert Burnett, Wilkinsburg, defeated Alford C. Pollock, Jr., Arnold School, 6-1, 6-1; Irvin Sobel, Rankin, defeated George Dixon, Carrick, 6-3, 6-3; Dan Robertson, Peabody, defeated Ken Mowry, Duquesne, 7-5, 6-0; William Miller, Taylor Allderdice, defeated Byron Dillon, Bellevue, 4-6, 6-3, 7-5; Tom McKennan, Peabody, defeated Rowland Wilson, Carrick, 5-7, 6-0, 6-2; Robert Madden, Schenley, defeated Jack Schroeder, Sewickley, 6-1, 6-2.

ROONEY PILOT SETS LINEUP

Art Rooney, manager of the J. P. Rooneys, defending champions in the West Penn Sandlot Football Conference, has announced the makeup of the squad that will attempt to retain the Conference championship in the coming race. The Rooneys held their initial drill last evening.

Five new men have been added to the roster, including Frank Cantoni, former Grove City guard star; Jesse Quatse, Pitt's all-America tackle of last year; George Demas, former Wash-Jeff star; Ernie Lewis, a guard at Pitt in 1930, and Jimmy Clark, regular Pitt fullback last year.

For the opening game against the East Liberty Papales, Rooney will have Mose Lentz at center; Lewis and Karcis at the guards, with probably Cantoni and Quatse starting at the tackles and Honey Guarino and Harp Vaughan at the ends.

In the backfield, Jimmy Rooney will be at quarterback; Bucky Wagner and Clark at the halves, and Mose Kelsh, veteran battering ram, at fullback. Hood, former Pitt star, also will be available for backfield duty.

Al Ciper, another former Panther lineman, and Ray Kemp, former Duquesne University tackle, complete the squad.

THE BABE

He's the Grand Slam of World Series—Here's His Life Story.

By EDWARD J. NEIL

Written for Associated Press

This is the eighth of 10 stories relating the prodigious world series feats of the one and only Babe Ruth. Nearing the end of his career, the Babe this year will make his tenth and perhaps last appearance in the classic.

Mayor James J. Walker, idol of New York, stood in the speaker's place by a great banquet table, and Babe Ruth, the penitent, sat at his side.

Babe Ruth

Ahead lay the rockiest of roads, the comeback trail. Not a man among the hundreds present knew whether the happy-go-lucky playboy of the diamond had the strength of character, the resolution, to turn his back on failure, the indulgences that had brought him down, and fight his way back.

FOR THE KIDS

Walker, brilliant orator, remarkable psychologist, trained his mightiest guns on the Bambino's bowed head. He thundered, exhorted, pleaded. Almost as though he were alone with Ruth he made his final plea, one hand on the big fellow's hunched shoulders.

"For the dirty-faced kids in the street . . . Babe . . . the kids who love you . . . idolize you . . . you can't fail. . . ."

The Babe lifted wet eyes that night, mumbled his thanks, and went home. His course might already have been set. Perhaps nothing could have stopped his thundering charge to the heights.

BIGGEST COMEBACK

Whatever his motivating power he came back at 32 with a rush no athlete in history ever has equaled. He hit .372 over the 1926 season, crashed 47 home runs, and drove the Yanks into the world series with the Cardinals, his seventh, and the first of a string of three in the reign of one of the mightiest of all baseball aggregations.

He set eight individual world series records in the seven-game battle with the Cardinals that Grover Cleveland Alexander won by fanning Tony Lazzeri with the bases full in the seventh, after relieving Jess Haines. The series ended with him still trying—thrown out stealing second with the tieing run and two gone in the ninth. He never let up from spring to fall.

He hit three home runs in the fourth game and scored four times. He scored the winning run in the first game, walked four times in the seventh game. He hit .300 walking 11 times, clouted four homers in the series.

He was roaring back up the comeback trail, his greatest feats still ahead.

DUKES TO STUDY W. VA. PLAYS

ficials to interpret the rules as they appear in the book, until, as he put it, the rules committee takes steps to change 'em.

Some interesting points were brought out when the much discussed and cussed dead ball rule was taken up. Until a special ruling was made, do you know that it would have been illegal to have kicked a placement goal, with a man holding the ball in the accepted style? Why? Well, simply because, under the new rule, with the man holding the ball resting on one knee, as soon as he touched the ball as it came back from center, it became dead.

UP TO CAPTAIN

Suppose a back gets away for a run, say, of 25 yards. He slips and falls or is hit, goes down and then, from force of habit, gets to his feet and starts to run again or makes a motion to do the same and a defensive player jumps on him. There you have two fouls—one for crawling and the other for piling on. Unless the captain of the team in possession of the ball is smart, the play is called back. But if the captain is using his coco he'll decline the piling-on penalty and take the setback for crawling.

SUN-TELEGRAPH STARS IN GRID BROADCASTS

Of interest to football fans in all parts of the United States, and especially to readers of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, is the announcement that a great nation-wide radio program is about to go on the air under the auspices of the All-America Board of Football. The members of this board are Glenn S. Warner, Jesse Harper, Bill Alexander, Eddie Casey and Christy Walsh, all writing exclusively for the Sun-Telegraph. Amos Alonzo Stagg, a member of this same group, also writes for the Sun-Telegraph during the football season.

Every Friday evening, from 9 to 9:30 (Pittsburgh time), starting this week, will find the All-America Football Hour commanding the attention of fans listening in through 35 radio stations. Christy Walsh, who founded the All-America Board eight years ago, will have general supervision of the weekly radio program and will be in charge at the microphone.

COACHES TO SPEAK

A band, directed by Freddie Rich, New York's popular leader of the moment, will shoot the air waves full of rollicking college music. A male quartet will harmonize on every appropriate college anthem known to undergrads and old grads.

The highlight of the weekly program will be the interview between Walsh and the leading football mentors of the day—a different coach on each week's program. Eddie Casey, head coach at Harvard, will open the big program on Friday. The following Friday evening will find Walsh at Chicago tossing football questions at Dick Hanley, of Northwestern. After that will come Fritz Crisler, of Princeton; Jimmy Crowley, of Michigan State; Pop Warner, of Stanford; Jesse Harper and Hunk Anderson, of Notre Dame; Howard Jones, of Southern California, and others, to be announced later.

SUN-TELEGRAPH STARS

Remember the hour, 9 to 9:30 every Friday night. The local station is WJAS (Columbia Broadcasting Station). And don't forget this—the members of the All-America Board of Football write exclusively for the Sun-Telegraph four times each week.

ALL-STARS SET FOR CRAWFORDS

An array of stellar minor league talent will be on display at Greenlee Field Friday and Saturday as the Minor League All-Stars engage the Pittsburgh Crawfords in a three-game series. The first game will be played Friday evening, the second Saturday afternoon and the third Saturday night.

Manager Billy Fuchs has gathered together probably the brightest stars that have left Pittsburgh during the past few years, and the Crawfords will get plenty of real competition.

Elmer Knetzer, Frank Roscoe and Joe Semler will toil on the mound. Joe Semler probably had more success than any pitcher ever produced in this section against the crack Negro clubs. Rip Collins, just back from Cumberland, who is headed for Binghamton next year, will be behind the bat.

Dick Goldberg, Bill Regan, Frank Packard, Harry Geisler, Ollie Carnegie, Tice, Jeff Fitzgerald and Ripple will complete the roster.

The three-game series should attract a big crowd of fans.

The night games will start at 8 o'clock, while the Saturday afternoon game is scheduled for 3 o'clock.

Stetson U. Drops Plans for Varsity

DELAND, Fla., Sept. 20.—(AP.)—A scarcity of football material, which Coach H. R. McQuillan said was due to players being unable to return to school because of financial difficulties, will prevent Stetson University from having a varsity team this year.

Sport Shorts

NEW YORK—Jack Sharkey will retire after one more fight, it was said here today. He plans to meet the winner of the Mickey Walker-Max Schmeling battle and then do a fadeout, win, lose or draw.

SPECULATOR, N. Y.—Max Schmeling, former heavyweight champion, is on edge for his battle with Mickey Walker at Long Island City next Monday night and will merely taper off in his training from now on.

SUMMIT, N. J.—Mickey Walker, whose famous boil nose is said to be in such condition as to finally permit him to box Max Schmeling next Monday night, plans to work out in his training quarters here today.

PHILADELPHIA—Cliff Sutter, intercollegiate champion, is ranked No. 1 among the college tennis players for the year. Bryan Grant, Jr., is No. 2 and Keith Gledhill, No. 3.

BEAUMONT, Tex.—Beaumont, of the Texas League, and Chattanooga, of the Southern Association, begin a Dixie championship series here today.

DALLAS, Tex.—Babe Didrikson, track and field sensation of the Olympic Games, has been ordered to take a rest from competition to prevent a nervous breakdown or an athletic heart condition.

BALTIMORE—The National Boxing Association, in annual session here, today considered dropping the junior-lightweight and junior-welterweight class designations.

LOS ANGELES—Ellsworth Vines, Jr., world tennis champion, has set October 1 as the date for his wedding to Miss Verie Low.

LONDON, Ont.—C. Ross Somerville, Canadian winner of the United States amateur golf championship, returned home yesterday unheralded and unsung, purposely slipping back at an unannounced time to prevent a demonstration. City Council will give him a public tribute, however.

NEW YORK—William Cunningham, 28, former railroad fireman, of Kansas City, got in line at the Yankee Stadium last night prepared to wait until next Wednesday and get a bleacher seat for the opening game of the world series.

Forbes

More People Beginning to Spend Money

By B. C. FORBES

ONE THING certain is: When more money begins to be made, more money will begin to be spent.

The executives of one nation-wide company sent this column the extremely interesting and revealing results of an investigation among its employes concerning what they have made up their minds to buy as soon as they are satisfied that better conditions have come to stay.

Mr. Forbes

Something of a boom in certain important lines of business is foreshadowed.

HAVE YOU noticed among your own friends, lately, revived talk about this, that and the next thing they are eager to buy?

Not so very long ago conversation most commonly referred to economies, to economies already achieved and to others contemplated. The keynote was caution, retrenchment, rigid conservation of resources. Most people were downcast, looked down and were cutting down.

Hope is being reborn in many quarters. Aspiration is displacing apprehension. Suppression of economic desires is giving way to thought and talk of satisfying them. It is not natural for Americans to be niggardly. They have not been acting naturally and are becoming tired of their long-continued irksome role.

SLIGHT THOUGH the recovery has been outside of security markets, some increase in buying by the public has already manifested itself.

WHAT OF the outlook?

G. E. Cullinan, vice president of Graybar, which "has 73 distributing houses covering most of the states and employing all sorts of wage-earners—truck drivers, office boys, clerks, stenographers, secretaries, salesmen, managers, top-line executives"—sent a letter to each employe asking him or her to send in a list of "things my family and I need now and would buy if I could be assured that business and economic conditions would no longer decline, but, rather, steadily improve, and that improvement would be reflected in my income."

The survey indicates that 1,100 employes plan to buy:

	Units.	Value.	Approx. Unit Value.
New homes	172	$1,021,500	$6,000
Automobiles	367	285,885	780
Refrigerators	491	85,211	174
Heating equip.	83	21,760	262
Wash. machines	277	20,966	75
Radios	206	14,067	70
Ironing mach.	155	13,192	85

Based on 1.5 people gainfully employed per family in this income group, "the total deferred demand in the United States, which will be purchased probably within the next two or three years as business conditions improve," follows:

New homes	3,096,000
Automobiles	6,606,000
Refrigerators	8,838,000
Heating equipment	1,194,000
Washing machines	4,986,000
Radios	3,708,000
Ironing machines	2,900,000

The conclusion reached is that there is forty billion dollars "latent" consumer buying power in the United States at this moment.

THAT'S A LOT of business. America's retail merchants sold fifty billion dollars' worth in 1929, the census of distribution shows. By 1931 the total had dwindled to about thirty-seven billions, while this year sales "will probably be about thirty billion dollars." L. D. H. Weld, director of research for McCann-Erickson, estimates.

Consumer demand, he points out, has been shifting during the last 20 years. Up to 1929 there was a market increase in sales of such luxury goods as jewelry, silverware, furs. Expenditures for automobiles increased enormously.

Of late people have been confining their purchases rather rigidly to necessities.

SATURDAY WAS probably the busiest day New York stores have enjoyed this year. By closing time the assortment of goods in various departments of various stores was extraordinarily meager.

High finance may be worrying over political prospects, but it is increasingly evident that the people have begun buying at least a little more freely.

Consolidated Oil Lets Steel Order

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—The Consolidated Oil Corporation announced today that its marketing subsidiary, Sinclair Refining Company, had awarded contracts for approximately 1,500 tons of fabricated steel for its refinery improvement program. The company is recalling 150 former employes at Kansas City for construction work and expects to increase this number to 250 or 300.

LABOR BUREAU INDEX UP

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—An upward spurt in the index of wholesale commodity prices, led by the returns on farm products, was reported in the Labor Department's analysis of August trends.

The gain for last month over July, reduced to the weighted index of 784 commodities, amounted to 0.7, going from July's figure of 64.5 to 65.2. The farm products group, however, registered a 2½ per cent gain. A similar boost was recorded by textile products, while both the food group and hides and skins showed a 1½ per cent gain.

Of the total list of commodities analyzed, 213 showed gains for the month and 436 remained stationary, while 135 decreased. Despite the net gain for the month, however, the comparison with August of last year showed a decrease of 9½ per cent. The index figure of 100 represents the average of 1926 prices.

Farm products gaining were barley, corn, rye, wheat, calves, poultry, cotton, eggs, hay and peanuts. Increasing food prices recorded were for butter, cheese, rye and wheat flour, fresh and cured beef and cured pork, veal, coffee, lard, sugar and most canned vegetables.

Other commodity classes showing an upward tendency included metals and metal products.

STOCKS HIGHER IN QUIET TRADING

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—(AP.)—The stock market moved forward in quiet trading today with railroad, mail order and farm equipment shares leading the way.

Carrier stocks again held the center of the stage. Wall street seemed to view more favorably the prospect of somewhat improved autumn earnings for the roads, and considerable interest was shown in an attempt to forecast the probable nature of August's statements, which will soon be appearing in volume. Better grain prices helped the mail order and farm equipments.

United States Steel did better after its weakness of yesterday, when the preferred stock was particularly vulnerable. The latter recovered about half of Monday's 7-point loss, and the common gained about a point. American Telephone, most of the tobacco stocks and a wide list of specialties advanced 1 or more.

Railroad news was moderately cheering. Both the eastern anthracite and the western grain roads reported further improvement in traffic. M. H. Cahill, chairman of the Missouri, Kansas and Texas, said that present carloadings are showing a "decided upward tendency" and that if this continues the daily average for September over his company's lines will be the highest since last November. In the anthracite field the August figures on employment showed that 10.5 per cent more men were at work in the mines in August than in July, with the anthracite payroll up 19.8 per cent.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation's move to speed up loans on small projects attracted attention. While the separate units would not be large, it was reasoned that any stimulation that could be given to small business should have an important influence.

COTTON PRICES STEADY, UP

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—Cotton futures opened steady at an advance of 12 to 16 points on steadier Liverpool cables and reports of heavy rain in the central belt. October, 6.87c; December, 7.01c; January, 7.08c; March, 7.18c; May, 7.30c; July, 7.40c.

There was comparatively little southern selling at the start, but after rising to 7.03 on the initial demand, December eased to 6.96 under realizing, while there also appeared to be more hedging.

Trading continued quiet later in the morning. December worked down to 6.92 or about 11 points from the high price of the morning and within 3 points of yesterday's close. At midday that position was selling at 6.99 and the general market was quiet and steady at net advances of 9 to 10 points.

Spot quiet; prices three points higher; quotations in pence: American strict good middling, 6.19; good middling, 5.94; strict middling, 5.74; middling, 5.59; strict low middling, 5.49; low middling, 5.39; strict good ordinary, 5.19; good ordinary, 4.89. 'Katy's' Carloadings Show Marked Upturn

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—In spite of the failure of cotton and wheat to maintain the price levels of the last month, carloadings on the M. K. and T. lines are showing a decided upward tendency, according to M. H. Cahill, chairman. If September loadings continue at the present rate of increase, the daily average will be the highest since last November, Mr. Cahill said.

MANAGEMENT'S BREAKDOWN COSTLY

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—The country has been paying a terrific price during the depression for stupidity entailing a breakdown of management in the large, but already there are surface indications of growing realization by more able business executives of their social responsibilities.

It is perhaps symbolic of this newer trend that heads of two great Standard Oil units—Walter Teagle, president, Standard Oil of New Jersey, and K. R. Kingsbury, president, Standard Oil of California, have recently been devoting their talents chiefly to plans for spreading employment.

Mr. Rukeyser

There is a growing appreciation of the importance in this complicated power of keeping social groups at work so that they can continue to exchange with one another the products of their hours of labor. In his Topeka (Kan.) address, dealing largely with the farm problem, Franklin D. Roosevelt set forth this viewpoint in an enlightened manner.

Along this line, the man who is probably San Francisco's outstanding banker and who is also otherwise one of the first citizens of the city, points out in a message to this column.

"While trade barometers hold much of promise for the immediate and long time future, there is, in my opinion, a far more favorable tendency in the growing acceptance of the doctrine that no prosperity can be sustained which does not spread employment to all willing to work; a recognition that the progress in perfecting our industrial machinery must be accompanied by such changes in our social practices as will spread the benefit throughout society. Increased tempo in industry will, of course, increase employment, but the point which is being recognized and accepted is that such employment must be spread among all in order to furnish the consumptive capacity necessary to utilize the increased productive capacity of applied science."

VALENTINE

Captivating Story of a Shy Girl Rushed Into Love

By HAZEL LIVINGSTON

Attendants at Val's Wedding Are Annoyed by Mrs. Carey's Sobs

CHAPTER XXVI.

Joe did not come with the family.

He came alone. Val was glad of that.

Right on his heels, but from the opposite direction, came the Presbyterian minister, walking fast, straining his near-sighted eyes to make out the numbers on the houses.

Aunt Julia came and stood in the doorway of Val's room. It was the first time she had seen Val in the dress with the blue fox.

"You look six feet tall and two inches wide," she said, touching the intricate tailoring of it. "Well, they do things up brown in Hollywood. You look a little like Greta Garbo in it—Greta with a black wig."

Val laughed out loud at that.

"Well, you make me think of a movie actress. I guess that's what I mean."

A sudden, high shriek from the flower girl, who, in the much-discussed white dress over a blue silk slip, was being jerked from the door by her red-faced, moist mother.

"I told you to keep away from Val's room. Now, take that—and that—and that."

READY FOR CEREMONY

The smack of Mrs. Carey's fleshy hand. Tears in Mrs. Carey's eyes. Tears in Val's. Sobs from Vivian.

"Now let's have peace—please!" Aunt Julia begged.

"Yes. Now you shut up, darling. Mama didn't mean to hurt you. I'm that nervous, Miss Macfarlane. I was so riled up when I found out Betty and her hubby was goin' to Yosemite for the week-end, and takin' the baby with them, mind you, after bein' begged to come to her own brother's wedding, that it just seemed like——"

"The minister's here," Ruth shrilled from the front door. "But it ain't Mr. Hink!"

Sounds of a tussle down in the side yard, and the angry voices of Edwina and Georgia, Joe's voice, calming them.

"We might as well start," Aunt Julia said. "We want to have plenty of time to eat, and they've got to get that train—"

"I should say so," Mrs. Carey said. "I know your cookin', Miss Macfarlane. I guess they don't want to have to miss nothin'——"

With her aunt beside her, Val walked out of her bedroom, through the kitchen and the dining room, to the living room. Joe was waiting. They smiled at each other. Something that was breathless and panting inside of Val stopped. She felt calm again.

MRS. CAREY INTERRUPTS

The minister cleared his throat, went and stood by the pink chrysanthemums Aunt Julia had arranged in the bay window. Little Vivian, clutching a gilt basket filled with Cecil Breuners, followed close on the heels of Val and Joe.

The Careys . . . could there be only five of them? . . . crowded through the dining room door, squeezing past Miss Volmer and Aunt Julia's cousin, for a better view.

The minister, a young man, pink-faced and earnest, began to speak.

Val tried to listen, but all she could hear was Vivian's breathing (the child should have her adenoids out), and the scraping of Georgie's shoes against the rungs of the chair.

From the corner of her eye Val saw Aunt Julia's worried frown . . . poor, darling Aunt Julia, worrying about Georgia scratching the chair.

"Do you, Joel, take this woman, Valentine—"

Joe's safe, familiar voice saying, "I do."

A sob from the davenport. "Oh, God!" Mrs. Carey moaned piteously. "Oh, God help me!"

"In sickness and in health—"

"Oh, God!—oh, God!"

"For richer, for poorer—"

Mrs. Carey's moans punctuating the service. Her whispered, "Oh, God—oh, God!"

"Sh-h!" Aunt Julia whispered sternly.

"Sh-h!" Miss Vollmer repeated.

Val lost all track of the ceremony. She was listening to Mrs. Carey's whispers.

MAN AND WIFE

When it was time for the ring, Vivian pressed so close that Val thought for a moment that the minister would take her little paw instead.

The ring was on her finger. Joe was kissing her.

She smiled up at him, seeing his dear, familiar face through a mist of tears. She was Joe's wife.

She could hear his mother, sobbing through the congratulations of the minister, the polite murmurs of Miss Volmer and the elderly cousin, the wiggles and squeaks of the children sliding back and forth on chairs.

"I hope you will both be very happy," Aunt Julia said. She said it politely and formally, as if she were congratulating strangers. Then she took Joe's elbow and whispered, "Make your mother stop that! The idea! On Val's wedding day!"

But Mrs. Carey had already stopped. She was wiping her eyes.

"I feel I lost my boy," she said. "I don't know when anything's affected me so, except his papa's funeral. I passed clean out that day. I'm very sensitive. Well, our boy and girl is married. Miss Macfarlane. Of course you're not a mother, so you don't know a mother's heart. I tell you, it's hard . . . Now what can I do to help with the supper? Just lend me an apron, and I'll get right at it—"

"Nothing to do," Aunt Julia said gruffly.

She led the way to the dining room, where pink and blue candles and Cecil Breuners and bachelor buttons carried out her "pink and blue" color scheme idea.

Capably, Mrs. Carey served the children, pressed second helpings of everything on Miss Vollmer, Aunt Julia, everybody——

"Anyone would think she was the one who cooked this, not me!" Aunt Julia said behind her hand to Val. "She'll be telling Miss Vollmer she made that sunshine cake, next!"

Val laughed, hardly hearing. She was thinking of Millie. Millie should have been here. Millie had not even answered her last letter. . .

Georgia was juggling a peach, pretending to consider throwing it at the back of Aunt Julia's cousin's head.

"Eat it, and quit playing with it!" Aunt Julia boomed.

"Can't, I'm too full!" Georgia answered, continuing to juggle.

In a sudden silence Val heard Mrs. Carey telling Edwina: "Run home and get the rice, will you, dear? We want to have it all ready for when they leave."

Georgia sidled up to the table, helped himself to a third piece of cake.

"Gee, this is swell," he said. "Betty never did have any wedding. Are you going to give away pieces of fruitcake in boxes, Joe? 'Cause if you are, I want a extra one, for my girl."

Joe's eyes were raised to the clock over the mantel.

Val's followed.

In another five or ten minutes they could leave . . . would have to leave . . . leave Aunt Julia, Cornish street, everything . . . perhaps forever . . .

Synopsis

Valentine Macfarlane is practically deserted at the age of 8 by her gay, widowed mother, Millie. She is brought up by a man-hating maiden aunt, Julia. Millie roams the world, then returns to America. Valentine becomes engaged to a neighbor boy, Joe Carey, who takes an architect's position in Minneapolis. Aunt Julia sends Val to visit Millie in Santa Barbara. Val returns with a luxurious Hollywood trousseau. Joe's selfish mother learns of the engagement and creates such a disturbance that Joe rushes home and arranges for an immediate wedding.

"You make me think of an actress," said Aunt Julia.

Madge and Lillian Discuss Plans for Dinner Dance

I drew the car to the side of the road as Lillian finished outlining the "psychology treatment" she had given her young daughter.

"What's the matter—a tire?" she asked, but I shook my head, laughing, as I turned off my ignition and clapped her on the shoulder.

"It's Mary who is diabolically clever," Lillian said, in tones that held admiraton, but tinged with disapproval.

I made no answer, for I knew there was no need of defending Mary to her. She was grateful for the older girl's scheme, but maternal jealousy, of which she possesses more than her share, made her dislike the spectacle of Ronald deserting her child for another girl, even in an acted comedy.

"But she's done a good job." Lillian's honesty was behind the tribute. "I only hope it lasts."

"It will!" The words were braver than my heart, as I turned on my ignition switch again and started the car down the road.

"You're the most heartening person in the world." She put her hand upon my arm carelessly, then was silent for a little space, her eyes fixed upon the autumn fields past which we were speeding.

"I don't want to talk about it any more just now," she said at last. "I feel as if it were all on the lap of the gods now, anyway. Mary and I have done all we can. If we've failed—"

"Don't say 'if,'" I admonished sharply.

"All right," she answered meekly; "but tell me more about what you're planning. A dinner dance, you said. How many?"

DICKY'S PLAN

"About 30, I imagine," I said, for I had been studying the question and had my answer ready.

"Where are you going to serve dinner—in the dining room? Thirty will be a tight fit there, won't it?"

"No. I hadn't planned it there," I said. "The living room is so big that if we move all the furniture out and wax the floors, we can put small tables sufficient for 30 around the walls, leaving a space in the center for dancing."

"Did you think of that all by yourself?" she asked, with a little laugh.

"No," I returned, "I didn't. Dicky really was responsible for the idea."

"I thought I recognized his hand," she said. "Of course it has been done before in private houses, but to stage it here in this old farmhouse—that's a stunt! I hope the Dicky-bird is really interested. He'll give you some nifty ideas in decoration, if his heart is in it."

"He's planning some of them already," I said. "I think he's only waiting for you and Harry to get here, to finish his plans."

"We'll have an executive session of four this very night," she said, and a chilly little feeling around my heart slipped away, and was succeeded by a warm glow, as unreasoning as the chill had been.

MADGE INCLUDED

Always, in the association of the Underwoods with us, I have realized that Dicky and Lillian, both artists, and Harry, expert in theatrical staging, shared knowledge and ability from which I was shut out by limitations of my capacity and training. I never let the knowledge spoil my enjoyment of their work, but I was inordinately glad to have Lillian include me in the "executive session."

Dicky, while meaning to be considerate, had shown only too plainly that he didn't think my opinion on decorations for the dinner dance worth much consideration, and I had been foolishly wounded by the knowledge. But Lillian, as always, had heartened me.

"Who are your crowd?" Lillian asked next. "Take the old folks first. They won't be bothered with an ordinary dinner, but I'll bet your mother-in-law and your father will want a choice table for this."

"They're going to have it," I returned, laughing.

"Two," Lillian said, checking upon her fingers; "the Garahams, four; the Underwoods, six; Katherine, seven — we'll make her come down—Hugh and Lee Chow, nine—I hope he has a mandarin robe concealed somewhere in his luggage—Phil and Mrs. Arlen, 11; Charles Owen, 12; the Brixtons, 14. Half your dinner, nearly, is grown-ups. Do you realize that?"

Well, he did and Russell Hickey was the lucky chap who ended up with his pie about evenly distributed between his "tummy" and his face. After much laughter Mr. Brown awarded him the prize which was a football. Russell immediately organized a Junior Komic Club football team and in a few weeks is going to challenge any and all Junior Komic Clubs to a game.

Who can help but sympathize with Will Hays in his efforts to keep the inmates of Hollywood pure in speech as well as in deed? Don't interrupt, please. To right-thinking people, it is deplorable that certain muggs should come to the "Cinema Capital," accept fat salaries, and then announce:

"Nobody has no culture in Hollywood and besides the gin is rancid. I wouldn't be here if it wasn't for back alimony pilin' up. What I need is a BREATH OF FRESH AIR."

Well, Sir, this sort of thing won't go on much longer. If our plans go through, and we think they will, the Doakes A-1, O. K. Suggestions Invited

Citizens With New Ideas on Local Tax Problems Should Attend City and County Hearings.

Senator James J. Coyne's legislative committee to investigate the costs of government in Allegheny County is scheduled to hold the first of a series of hearings in the new County Office Building at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

City Council plans to hold a meeting soon for consideration of proposals for new city taxes that would take some of the tax burden off real estate. The Legislature, it will be recalled, passed at the recent session a bill authorizing Pittsburgh and Philadelphia to tax anything, during the next three years, that is not already taxed by the state.

Senator Coyne declares he will welcome at the hearing all citizens who may have anything to say as to how economies may be effected in the county government. Complaints of extravagance and waste will receive careful consideration, he announces.

President John S. Herron, of City Council, also invites suggestions as to new sources of revenue that may be tapped by authority of the new tax law.

It is to be presumed that the Chamber of Commerce, the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board, the Building Owners and Managers Association and the other civic and trade bodies that have interested themselves heretofore in municipal finances and taxation matters will be represented at both the Coyne and the Council hearings.

It is to be hoped that other citizens with ideas on these subjects will also take advantage of the opportunity to present them where they may do some good.

Value of Straw Votes

Polls Like the One Now Being Conducted by the Hearst Newspapers Are Remarkably Reliable.

Straws show the way the wind blows.

The old adage may be amended to "straw votes show which way the wind blows." In the realm of political prophecy no other means has been proved to be so nearly accurate, asserts Dr. Claude E. Robinson, of Columbia University.

He states that the nation-wide poll made by the Hearst newspapers in 1928 was the most accurate ever made in this country.

In "Straw Votes," a study just published by the Columbia University press, he says that newspaper polls such as the one now being conducted by the Hearst newspapers provide the closest forecasts. Politicians score second and political writers come third.

He states that the nation-wide poll made by the Hearst newspapers in 1928 was the most accurate ever made in this country.

"On the face of the straw returns alone, without interpretative correction, the Hearst newspapers forecast the 1928 presidential pluralities in 46 states with an average error of only 5 per cent. In 13 of the 46 states in which the Hearst canvass was conducted the plurality prognostication was in error 1 per cent or less, which is virtually perfect prediction."

Considering the frequent shift in sentiment, the immensity of the area covered and the complexity of the task, which involves the sending out and receiving of millions of straw ballots, the degree with which a well-conducted straw poll comes to being right is one of the phenomena of the times.

And again in this presidential campaign, the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and other Hearst newspapers are conducting an impartial, systematic, comprehensive, nation-wide poll to determine the sentiment of the country on the presidential candidates. Daily the results are carried in the news columns.

Second Registration Day

Be Sure to Qualify for Voting in the Important November Election.

Residents of the cities of Allegheny County—Pittsburgh, McKeesport, Clairton and Duquesne—have their second opportunity today to register for the November election.

The polling places will be open this evening from 5 to 11 o'clock, daylight saving time.

Be sure to qualify for this important election. There is a third registration day, October 8, but do not postpone registering until then, lest some emergency arise on that day which will keep you from the polls and result in your finding yourself without a vote on November 8.

The registration on the first day was disappointingly small—about 24,900 under the registration on the first day in the presidential campaign four years ago. It is to be hoped today's registration will make a better showing.

Evidence Against Dives

The Sensible Way to Proceed Against Illegal Resorts Is by Employing "Undercover" Men.

A number of places were mentioned as illegal resorts in testimony given before Judge Frank P. Patterson yesterday in the case of Constable John Healy, of the Nineteenth Ward.

It was hinted that the county detectives could be expected to raid the places.

But is it likely that the proprietors would fail, after being publicly accused in open court, to get rid of the evidence of lawlessness before the arrival of the detectives?

The way to proceed against speakeasies, gambling houses and the like is not to wait until complaints have been made against them in court and then conduct raids. The sensible way is to employ "undercover" men to get the evidence.

"Looks Like the Drought's Over, Sam'l!"

"It looks like rain," says Mr. Maine,
A dame who knows her onions.
"The long, long drought has petered out—
I feel it in my bunions.
It's pouring hard in my back yard
And on the fields of clover,
And when it pours on these dry shores
It rains the country over."

The Eastern sky, once hot and dry,
Yodels a song of thunder,
The laughing rills leap down the hills,
And is it any wonder?
For all the land from strand to strand
Is reeking with humidity.
Election day will wash away
An age of Dry stupidity.

Popular Crazes

One of the pleasantest things about the arrival of the first frost on the pumpkin these days is the temporary passing of the "nudist" menace.

* * *

Perhaps you are one of those happy optimists who think that nudism is a joke and NOT a menace. Don't fool yourself! Once you probably thought that jazz would never be accepted as "music," that "sex" and "sex-appeal" would never be discussed outside of the smoking car, and that woman would never cut off her "crowning glory" or wear pants! Oh, you DID, eh? you? So did I.

* * *

It is true that prohibition and sex-appeal have become the great national jokes. But that is the way with everything. First, it is shocking, then it is a menace, then it becomes a moral issue, then a popular CRAZE—and finally a joke!

Grandmother never heard of "sex" or "sex-attraction." Mother spoke of it only in a whisper and with a blush. Sister came out flatly and took it up in a serious way. Now Little Sister snickers at it.

* * *

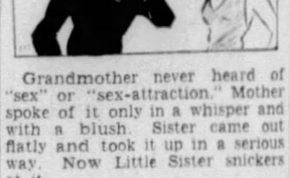
For a while, "sex-appeal" was the Big Motif of every popular novel, play and song—and most of the after-dinner stories. Now, the mere mention of it makes us yawn. Even the crooners sing about "moons" and "Junes" and stick to romance and undying love. Only the torch-singers continue to harrow our souls with wails for torrid love and burning kisses. Ho-hum!

* * *

After 10 years of concentrating on the sex-motif, glorifying it, preaching against it, excoriating it, magnifying it, we have discarded it like an old last-year's beach hat. Among the sophisticated, it is 'way back in the class with sheiks, vamps, the tango and the banana song.

* * *

But it has left the torch-singer and the backless bathing suit. And even though prohibition may pass away, it will leave us a legacy of ruined stomachs, acidosis and hard drinkers. Those things always leave something in their wake.



ANYTHING is likely to happen in this age of new crazes, popular manias and strange deliriums. Once, I thought that "companionate marriage" had caught the public fancy and had a fair chance of being a roaring success. And I visualized millions of discarded wives, all over 40, wailing for their lost wedding rings. But that menace has passed.

* * *

Now, it's nudism! After that, there will be nothing left to complete the utter annihilation of love, romance and all our illusions—except to blacken our teeth and shave our heads! But we pin our hopes on Jack Frost—and look forward joyfully to the first blizzard.

AT SEA DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

AT SEA, Sept. 20.—Nothing is more soothing than awakening aboard ship. A worrisome world melts with the mist. September skies fluff a teasing of May. The sun in gay archness flashes through the porthole like the boreal aurora. A sea pullulates in sultry rhyme. How I go on!

Much success of a voyage depends upon the cabin steward. Ours is an oak-bosomed, squat Frenchy who won us instantly because of a blushing confusion. Coming in with breakfast, he tripped into a comic fall with the tray aloft, everything intact, crying: "Voila!" Chaplin couldn't have improved it.

He is full of "Alors!" I've a feeling I could work my way through France with a Willie Howard shrug and a ready "Alors!" Alors is like our expression "Well"—it means anything. Rather everything. O, yes, for petit dejunier I tried an old favorite, Oeufs Florentine, a divine souffle of eggs and spinach.

Swaying through the corridors and up to the promenade deck I caught up with Sam Hellman, the magazine writer, at the second turn. It was our first meeting since we showed the late Rudolph Valentino the St. Louis levee by gaslight, about 10 years ago. We reuned by a taffrail.

Sam now lives in Paris and his outstanding ears, which he frequently parodies, recall Bugs Baer's quip: "He looks like a taxi with both doors wide open." Others on board are Harry Bannister of the Ann Harding hoop-de-doo: Claude Bowers, deservedly famed editorialist; Jean Tillier, a head man of the line at 34, and Baroness Levi.

* * *

Following an over-night decision to sail, I phoned Harry Silvey at the Lambs to say farewell. "I think I'll go along," he said. I double-dared him, and that prematurely gray gallant is making his first trip across. It is always fun showing the novitiate European sights. One takes on a tremendous worldliness, and what whoppers one can tell with no fear of contradiction!

* * *

Silvey, incidentally, has not been seen since the take-off. A deck steward tells me he saw him last, in the moonlight silhouetted in a sequestered nook on top deck. "Wiz ze young mam'selle in red," he offered. Within yelling distance of Quarantine, and in clutches of the ship's vamp already! Blond voyage!

* * *

The bar, in a modernistic glitter and icy tinkle, always is exhilarating, even for a teetotaler. A tweedy sprout in plus fours, with eyes alight with invitation, and slightly anpointed with the oil of gladness, beckoned me to his table, naively confessing: "I just downed two dry Martinis and, Mister, I feel elegant. Let's ade into a magnum of—" As suddenly, his face surged with a gray pallor, he looked about wildly and with an incoherent mutter, pss-s-t! he was gone. Dat ole debble sea! And the pink bereted flapper who yelled to approaching friends: "Am I necking young Mr. Thomas Collins!"

* * *

Every writer of sea tales stresses the dreamy look of men who go down to sea in ships. My youth was a feverish urge for that romanticism known as sailing before the mast. What subtle euphemism! Sailing before the mast for most sailors turns out, then and now, an adventure in swobbing deck with a sour mop. That dreamy look you read about is hopeless frustration. I'll lub land for mine.

* * *

About the French is a beplumed fuss over nothing whatever, utterly captivating. In a light doze awhile ago in my berth, I was conscious of a presence. When my lids fluttered, a steward whispered: "M'soo is awake!" He slid out, returning with an epauleted mogul who inquired to know if I would receive another person, obviously his superior. This gentleman, most magnificent of all, came in a flurry of quick bowing. He wanted to know if he might bring a vase of roses from Pursuer Villar, the sea's most celebrated Sir Galahad. A clap of the hands and the myrmidon came with the flowers. I've thought up something dandy to trick it up even more. Just before the flowers arrive, they should ring in a leather-lunged trumpeteer in periwig and knee pants.

* * *

Another thing. A well trained French servant can never do anything first crack. He must have hysterics first. Then in cow-eyed docility he does it.

* * *

With a dozen exceptions, this ship certainly is not cluttered with Maxine Elliots. I'm not angling to be caught in a web of intrigue, but, in sedate maturity, I'd like to feel at least I'm resisting temptation. So far the feminine flotilla gives an idea the trip was made to order for a Trappist Monk.

Things fashionable are usually expensive.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

I am my brother's keeper.

And if I do not keep him wisely and generously, I will suffer as well as he.

Let me confess, before we go any further, that I did not always feel this way about my brother. Time was when I would not even admit that he WAS my brother.

My kindly and high-minded parents assured me that he was; but I looked him over, and rejected their notion with scorn.

All those stupid, lazy, dirty, silly and, at times, actually criminal people, "my brothers?"

The tough kids who lived across the railroad tracks; the slatternly women who lolled out of tenement windows, smelling of boiled cabbage, with the sooty lace curtains brushing their greasy hair; the leery, baggy old men who doddered in front of the livery stable—all these "my brothers?"

NOTHING DOING!

Big-hearted philosophers could call such creatures "brothers" if they wished, but I despised, denied and rejected the relationship.

I—so I convinced myself—had nothing in common with such disgusting beings. It was true they belonged to the human race, as did I. But there was no other bond between us. I was not responsible for them, nor for their plight, and no one was going to hand that responsibility on to me.

Nor was their plight excusable. It was their own fault. All men were "born free and equal." If, by their own shiftlessness, they chose to become what they were, let them suffer the consequence.

I, too, have been born poor. I, too, have lacked opportunity; had suffered ill health; had experienced misfortune. But I, unlike these, had been willing to work hard, had refused to take the count. Then why should I share my hard-won gains with them? Why should I call them "brothers" and help them, when they refused to help themselves?

So I thought in my ignorant and intolerant youth.

And then life took me in hand, smacked me down, rubbed my nose in the gravel, handed me a couple of haymakers — and taught me some sense. And I came to see the other fellow's point of view.

He hadn't been "born free and equal." He was no more responsible for his start than I was for mine. I was proud of myself because I had surmounted my obstacles. I had despised him because he hadn't surmounted his. But, whatever my other handicaps, I had been born with energy and intelligence which gave me the power to surmount, and he had been born with inertia and stupidity mingled, like a vicious secret poison in his thin blood and rickety bones.

I was the child of mysterious and manifold destinies, and those destinies "which shaped my ends" had somehow proved a blessing to me. But he was also a child of mysterious and manifold destinies which, beyond all his willing, had proved a curse to him.

And so, because we both came blindly out of the same darkness and moved blindly through the same twilight into the darkness again, he WAS my brother and I was his. Since we were linked by a common fate, set on a common trail, it was up to me to be my brother's keeper.

And the proof of this I could see in every circumstance of my life. I could see great governments and great industries crumbling because the rich had not helped the poor. I could see proud peoples brought to shame and vicious debauchery because the wise and the good had not helped the wicked and the weak.

And so, today, I know I am my brother's keeper. If I do not keep him we will both be lost.

Mr. Hoover's Frantic And Futile Message

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

It is not remarkable that the magnitude of the Democratic sweep in Maine should have shocked administration leaders out of their accustomed complacency. However, it is surprising that in their pain they should so far forget political strategy as publicly to admit their state of mind.

It is not merely that the people there have chosen a Democrat for Governor. That might have implied a mere dissatisfaction with the management of state affairs. But when the people find three Republicans in Congress standing foursquare for the Hoover policies and retire two of them, to send Democrats opposed to the Hoover policies, there is no escaping the national significance of the vote. Last week 100 per cent of the Congressional representation of Maine was Administration; today, but 33 per cent. Should this proportion of change carry on throughout the country, the Democratic majority in the next House will be overwhelming—too heavy, in fact.

* * *

Laborer and Farmer Unite

The impressive thing about the vote is that the heavy drift away from the administration and its record of ineptitude and tragic failure is found in both industrial and agricultural sections. The laborer and the farmer have marched all one way. This should not be surprising, since both have been the victims of discrimination. The jobless in the industrial centers, some of whom have had their citizenship taken away by a Republican Board of Registration because of their misfortune, voted for a change. The farmers in Maine have been victims of the same discrimination as those in Iowa, and they have followed their common sense in adding two more of Moses' "sons of the wild jackass"—friends of the farmers—to the House. These are the forgotten men—as far as this and the two preceding administrations have been concerned.

Maine voted against the ticker-tape statesmanship in Washington.

* * *

Reaction to Hoover Speech

Even more surprising, however, is the revulsion in Maine against the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act. The two Democrats, running on the Democratic platform, ran as "wets"; and the defeated Republicans, running on the Hoover platform, forced upon the Republican convention by Ogden Mills at the behest of Herbert Hoover, ran as "drys." Even Mr. Hoover's laborious and stumbling attempt to confuse the people as to his position in his acceptance speech has had no effect. His acceptance speech came too soon after his vigorous fight in the convention against an honest straight repeal plank. Maine has had enough.

* * *

G. O. P. Fought To Win Maine

It cannot be said that the administration let Maine go by default. It sent its heaviest artillery into the fight. Scarcely any of the national Democratic leaders of the first order participated in the campaign; but the administration sent members of the cabinet, and Ogden Mills closed the contest with a speech that glittered with blunders.

Thus the consternation in the administration camp. Its leaders frankly have conceded their chagrin. Even Mr. Hoover has given vent to his pain. He writes a message to his national chairman in which again he seeks to transfer responsibility for the tragic plight of Americans to Europe. Unhappily the millions are not unmindful of the heavy contributions the administration has made to human misery. The public has reached a very definite conclusion regarding the part the Hoover and Coolidge administrations played in the fatal inflation of the market bubble. It knows Mr. Hoover's heavy responsibility for a tariff which has robbed us of our foreign markets and destroyed our foreign trade. There are 2,500,000 men who are jobless today on that account. It knows that the administration's procrastination in dealing with the human problem of the unemployed has been tragic in its effects. And it reads with interest these presidential words:

"Our task is to acquaint every man and woman in the country with the facts and issues which confront the nation."

The embarrassment of the administration is that the people are so familiar with the "facts and issues" that with Mr. Hoover's organization in control of most of the agencies of publicity they cannot be deceived.

Thoroughly frightened now, Mr. Hoover sounds the keynote of despair in his recourse to the old plan of trying to persuade the people that a departure from the ticker-tape statesmanship we have had would be an abandondonment of "sound principles of government."

No administration in history has ever trampled upon more "sound principles of government" than his. That is the reason that we are where we are today. It was Mr. Hoover who said, four years ago at Elizabethtown, Tenn., that there is a direct connection between the economic conditions of a people and the policies of government in operation. We know what the economic condition of the people is today and whose policies have been in operation.

* * *

Stocks Rose, But Purely Artificially

Perhaps Mr. Hoover's cry of despair in his message to Mr. Sanders means that the attempt to deceive the people into believing that the market reflects a return to prosperity is to be abandoned. A desperate effort has been made, artificially, and through manipulation, to force the stock market up, and when this began to work in July, and stocks that are not paying dividends, of industries having no profits, began to rise, the ballyhoo began. "The crisis is passed," exclaimed Mr. Hoover only the other day.

That did not mean that jobless men were finding jobs; that farmers were making money; that merchants were increasing sales; that foreign markets lost through the stupidity of administration policies were being opened to our products. It merely meant that some stocks had been forced up a bit. There was nothing in business conditions to explain. And the result is that last week there came a slump to pre-July prices.

The market is no barometer of economic conditions, not when it is in the hands of manipulators with their eyes on the election.

That job was begun too soon; it should have been postponed until a week or 10 days before the election.

When the average man of ordinary intelligence notes that railroads are making less money than ever before, and are forced to ask another cut in wages, he is not impressed with the upward shoot of railroad stock.

* * *

'Forgotten Man' Now Thinks for Himself

Perhaps Maine will convince the Administration that this will not work; and Mr. Hoover's despairing message to Mr. Sanders may indicate a change to "patriotism" and "sound government." It ought to be easy enough to meet that kind of an appeal. There are a surprising number of Americans who do not believe we have had "sound government" for a decade.

The Maine result, startling as it is, does not mean that the election is over; but it does indicate that the "forgotten man" is doing his own thinking on "the facts and issues" Mr. Hoover mentions.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

The Loneliest Heart

Which is the loneliest heart that beats tonight
If we could truly read
Each hidden struggle and each secret plight,
Each brother's stress and need?

Ah, does it throb on some forgotten isle,
Unmarked on any chart,
Or in some crowded city where no smile
Bids weariness depart?

The loneliest heart, wherever it may dwell,
Is one that thrust aside
Another heart which loved it all too well
And, loving, starved and died.

The loneliest heart is that which now must know
Only in dreams the touch
Of clinging hands of one who long ago
Put faith in it too much.
